PARIS CONFERENCE TO TAKE UP AMERICAN WAR CLAIM

United States Envoys to Press for Equal Rights With Allies in Payments From Germany

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The famous clock room in the French Foreign Office, where Woodrow Wilson, Georges Clemenceau and their fellow-peacemakers prepared the Treaty of Versailles, will assume the aspect of the treaty-making days on Wednesday of this week when the Allied and American diplomats and financiers meet there to settle some of the conflicts of peace. It is the general opinion that the discussions are likely to furnish a few sessions that may surpass in warmth some of the liveliest meetings of the big five.

The demand of the American government for a share in the proceeds of the Dawes plan as a means of paying the American occupation claims and the cost of the occupation of the Coblenz bridgehead will come up early in the proceedings.

In view of the large attendance of allied finance ministers and experts, together with the representatives of the Washington government, it is expected the conference will refer most of the questions on its agenda to committees, calling full sessions only when the reports have been threshed out in the committees.

TROUBLE IN ACCOUNTS

A settlement of the accounts of the Ruhr occupation will take up considerable time, since the accounts of France and Belgium are complicated by a controversy with Great Britain over how much of the proceeds of that occupation should be applied toward payment of expenses. The British are afraid that this cost should be set up to a certain limit from deliveries in kind, but they insist that no money be paid for that purpose and that allowances be made to the excess of the occupation costs over the ordinary expenses of maintaining the same number of men in home garrisons. The French want the entire cost taken from the proceeds.

The question will be taken up in connection with a general revision of the lump sums fixed for military occupation of the Rhineland. The French will ask that a limit be put upon the number of men maintained in the Ruhr.

The discussion also will be directed to the costs of various operations under the Versailles treaty, as well as the question of the extent to which Germany will be granted a moratorium in order to check inflation, lest a revolt the financial and economic situation.

TIMED DELICATE TASK

One of the most delicate tasks of the conference will be to determine what sums of the Allies received on reparations account in excess of their debts to the United States, such as Great Britain, France and Jugo-Slavia, for instance, are said to have had in

RHINE PLAN ANNOUNCED

Allies Will Hold Bridgehead

Ambassadors' Note to Berlin Charges Violations of Versailles Treaty

Unofficial German Comment Avers Defaults Cited Lack Foundation

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Germany was informed by the interallied Ambassadors here today in an identical note that the Allied troops would not evacuate the Cologne bridgehead on the 10th inst. The note was the outcome of the recent decision of the Allied Council of Ambassadors that Germany had not fulfilled the obligations she had accepted as a condition to evacuation.

Un official comment on the note was confined to a brief communique in which the German government charges that the defaults noted as the basis for the Allied refusal to vacate the Cologne zone are of such a general nature and so completely lacking in material foundation that discussion of them must be deferred until the Allied governments submit an amplifying note.

The German government, however, the communique declares, believes itself warranted in asserting that the present state of the disarmament question affords no justification for the adoption of so grave a measure as the continua-

OPENING OF REICHSTAG IS ORDERLY

President to be Chosen, Organization Effected on Wednesday

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Except for a few shouts of "amnesty" from the Communist benches the first meeting of the recently elected Reichstag passed off quietly today.

The opening was in sharp contrast to the initial meeting of the preceding Parliament, when hisses and roars of disapproval from the Communist and ultra-Nationalist benches made orderly progress impossible.

When the gavel fell this morning there was a mild-mannered and unsuccessful attempt by Communist Deputy Thaelmann to obtain the floor before a roll call was taken, but there was no demonstration.

After the roll call the People's party offered a motion to adjourn until the formation of a Cabinet, but only the members of that group and the German Nationalists favored it, so that a motion to reconvene on Wednesday for the choice of a president and the organization of the House prevailed.

One reason for the quiet session was the absence of Gen. Ludendorff and Admiral Von Tirpitz.

RUTHENBERG IS SENTENCED

Notorious Red Agitator Fails in Effort to Delay Court's Order; May Appeal Again

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

ST. JOSEPH (Mich.) Jan. 5.—Charles E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland, nationally known radical and confessed Communist, will be a prisoner in the State prison at Jackson before the end of the week, Sheriff Fred C. Franz said tonight.

Ruthenberg, whose conviction of violating the State antisyndicalism statute, was recently affirmed by the Michigan Supreme Court in an opinion scathing in its denunciation of the "Red" propagandists in this country, was sentenced to serve from three to ten years today by Circuit Judge Charles E. White before whom he was tried in 1923.

Judge White denied a motion for rested judgment maye by Attorney Isaac Ferguson of Chicago, a member of Ruthernebrg's counsel.

Ruthernebrg was permitted one more meal at a St. Joseph hotel before deputies conducted him to the County Jail, wherein he was confined for a short time following the raid on the secret Communist convention at Bridgman in 1922, when he and a score of other radical leaders, including William Z. Foster, were caught. At the jail Ruthenberg denied that he had done other than join in a "peaceful assemblage," and asserted that he was being denied liberty without due process of law. He also expressed confidence that the State Supreme Court will admit him to bail pending an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

With Ruthenberg sentenced, State and county authorities are turning their attention to the trials of the remaining asserted agitators and anarchists seized at Bridgman by former Sheriff George C. Bridgman and Department of Justice operatives. Attorney Ferguson today refused to agree on a plan suggested by Prosecutor George H. Bookwalter for group trials for the remaining women and men under indictment. Ferguson said the respondents would insist upon separate trials. After this announcement the prosecutor and Asst. Atty.-Gen. O. L. Smith, who came here today, stated to the court that they would proceed with the remaining radical trials February 2 and named Robert Minor, Chicago, as the first to be called. Minor, a cartoonist for asserted revolutionary organs, was among those arrested at Bridgman.

It was also announced today that William Z. Foster, recent Presidential candidate on the Communist ticket, will be retried. Foster was the first to be tried. The hearing lasted for nearly a month and at its conclusion the jury, which included one woman, disagreed.

VETO TEST UP TODAY

Postal Bill Vote in Senate

Administration Leaders Are Confident President Will be Upheld

Motion to Recommit, Although Lost, Shows Required Total

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Coolidge's veto of the postal pay increase bill will be sustained in the Senate tomorrow if administration leaders can hold the strength they were able to develop tonight on the first test vote. They are confident they can do so.

The test came on a motion by Chairman Sterling of the Postoffice Committee, to recommit the pay measure which received executive disapproval last June. That motion was voted down, 30 to 52, but the thirty votes cast for recommittal is two more than the one-third necessary to prevent the measure becoming a law without Presidential sanction. If the President is sustained the House will not be called upon to act, the pay rise measure having originated in the Senate. In its place will be advanced the administration's combination pay and postal rate increase bill introduced last week by Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, who failed in an effort today to place it before the Senate prior to consideration of the veto.

MUST VOTE TODAY

Under the unanimous consent agreement which becme operative today the Senate must vote on the veto not later than 4 p.m., tomorrow.

Under the parliamentary situation now existing, the pay and rate advance measure cannot be brought up immediately and there were free predictions today by Senators speaking for the over-riding of the veto that the bill would not be passed at this session.

One Democrat—Dial, South Carolina—joined with twenty-nine Republicans in voting to send the pay measure to the Postoffice Committee, while eighteen Republicans, among them Jones of Washington, party whip and Reed of Pennsylvania, and Wadsworth of New York, joined with the thirty-three Democrats and one Farmer-Labor Shipstead, in defeating the motion. The roll call follows:

BALLOT RESULT

Republicans—Ball, Borah, Bursum, Butler, Cameron, Capper, Cummins, Curtis, Ernst, Fess, Greene, Hale, Harreld, Keyes, McCormick, McKinley, Metcalf, Moses, Norbeck, Oddie, Pepper, Phipps, Shortridge, Smoot, Sterling, Warren, Watson, Weller and Willis—29.

Democrats—Dial—1. Total 30.

RICHARDSON WINS TWO LEGISLATIVE VICTORIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 5.—Gov. Richardson won two outstanding victories today when the forty-sixth biennial session of the State Legislature convened. Frank Merriam of Long Beach was re-elected Speaker of the Assembly and Senator A. H. Breed was elected president pro-tem. of the Senate. Both men were administration candidates. Their election indicated that Gov. Richardson has maintained control of both branches of the Legislature in spite of the boasts of the antiadministration element.

Speaker Merriam won over Assemblyman Isaac Jones of San Bernardino, by a margin of one vote. The count was Merriam, 40; Jones, 39; absent, 1. Jones was put forward as the opposition candidate at the last moment, it having been understood that the anti-administration element would back Albert A. Rosenshine of San Francisco.

JONES NOMINATED

Rosenshine withdrew when it became apparent that he would lose the support of Assemblyman T. M. Wright of Santa Clara, and a little group of "drys." Jones was placed in nomination by Rosenshine, who made it a clear-cut fight between Gov. Richardson and his foes by throwing down the "progressive" challenge.

Senator Breed scored an overwhelming victory over his opponent, Senator Herbert C. Jones, the count being Breed, 29; Jones, 10; not voting, 1. The lines were not so clearly drawn in this fight, however, Senator Breed's election appearing assured before the contest.

The victories are regarded as important in the Governor's camp as the presiding officers appoint committees and generally direct the course of legislation.

ANGELO ELECTED

Joe Nolan of Los Angeles, was re-elected sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. Assemblyman Homer Spencer of Oakland, was chosen Speaker pro tem of the Assembly, and A. H. Ohnimous of San Francisco was chosen chief clerk. Louis Erb of San Francisco, was named minute clerk.

C. H. Wilkinson of San Francisco was elected sergeant-at-arms of the Assembly, and R. J. Powers was elected minute clerk. Rabbi R. I. Coffey of Oakland was named chaplain of the Assembly.

The Legislature will proceed to take up business tomorrow, when it is expected that ratification of the Federal child labor amendment will be proposed. Reapportionment of legislative representation, the matter of most moment to Southern California, will be the big fight of the session, many of the Northern and Central Representatives being opposed to any change, as their districts will be merged with others to give the South a larger number.

VOTE FOR SPEAKER

For Jones—Adams, D. P. Anderson, Bernard, Broughton, Burns, Byrne, Campbell, Crittenden, Crotter, Dorris, Finney, Fry, Hawes, Heisinger, Hornblower, Jacobson, Jones, Levey, McDonough, McDowell, Eleanor Miller, J. A. Miller, Mitchel, Morrison, Mueller, Murray, Nelson, Oliva, Reindolar, Roland, Rosenshine, Runner, Saylor, Schmidt, Spence, West, Williamson, T. M. Wright, Woodbridge.

The vote in the Senate was as follows:

Mrs. Scott Again on Stand

Wife of Congressman Dons Kimono in Courtroom to Refute Testimony

Statement of Secretary is Branded as Nothing But "Malicious Lies"

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ALPENA, Jan. 5. — Following a day of rest after a gruelling five hours on the stand Saturday, which nearly brought about her collapse, Mrs. Frank D. Scott, wife of Congressman Scott of the Eleventh District, today resumed her testimony before a packed courtroom.

Mrs. Scott denied practically everything that both her husband and his secretary, Miss Jane Kennedy, had sworn to during the early days of the trial.

Mrs. Scott donned the kimono which, according to Miss Kennedy, the star witness for Scott, was burned by a cigarette in the hands of Capt. "Jambo" Sumner, an army officer, while he was visiting Mrs. Scott in her Washington apartments in 1923.

SPECTATORS GASP

Mrs. Scott stood up before a gasping courtroom while Judge Frank E. Emerick and I. S. Canfield, attorney for Representative Scott, looked for the hole which Miss Kennedy said had been burned in the kimono by the cigarette. Mrs. Scott finally had to come to their rescue and point out a hole, about the size of the end of a pencil. The hole was several inches below the waist line and more toward the hip than in the middle of the back.

Mr. Canfield told the court he did not believe this was the kimono which Miss Kennedy had referred to, and objected to its being presented as an exhibit in the case. Judge Emerick ruled that it should be submitted.

Mrs. Scott explained the hole in the kimono and the visit of Capt. Sumner the night the kimono was burned, as follows:

"It was 9:30 p.m. Capt. Sumner came to my apartment and asked for a drink. I gave him one, and then we sat down, he with his cigarette in one hand and his glass in the other. He dropped some cigarette ashes and asked me to jump up. I didn't know until later that the kimono had been burned."

DESCRIBES DRINKING

Description of drinking, card playing and presence of a roulette wheel in the home of a Congressman was described by Mrs. Scott. She told of a visit she and her husband made at the home of Congressman Allan Moore at Monticelli, Ill., in 1922.

"Was there any drinking?" she was asked.

"Yes, the drinking was about the usual amount that might go on in any Congressman's house."

Mrs. Scott testified her husband won considerable money at cards during the visit, but did not tell

WOMAN RULES WYOMING

Wife of Late Governor Ross Takes Oath of Office During Ceremonies Marked by Simplicity

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHEYENNE (Wyo.) Jan. 5.—A climax to more than fifty-years of equal rights for women in Wyoming came shortly after noon today when Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, formally took over her duties as Governor of the State.

Inaugural ceremonies, Spartan-like in their severity and simplicity, marked the induction into office of the first woman Governor of any Commonwealth in the United States.

With a pledge placing her mental and physical faculties at the disposal of the people for the administration of affairs of State, and calling for "divine guidance" to direct her, a woman, heavily swathed in mourning for her husband, the late Gov. William B. Ross, stepped into the place made vacant by the death of her husband less than three months ago.

SUPPORT PLEDGED

Tears welled up in her eyes as Acting Governor Lucas, in a brief address, pledged to her the fullest co-operation of the State officials in her administration of the government, called upon the electorate of the State to stand solidly behind her and paid a glowing tribute to the virtues of her husband.

Tonight, flushed with happiness and excitement and saddened in turn with the thought of her recent bereavement, the new Governor looked through a great heap of congratulatory telegrams coming from persons of all walks of life the country over. Included in the lot was one from Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson of Texas, who after January 25, will share with Mrs. Ross the distinction of being a woman Governor.

TRIBUTE TO WOMEN

It was a fitting and added tribute to the womanhood of the country that the oath of office was administered by one of the men—Chief Justice C. N. Potter of the Wyoming Supreme Court—who on September 30, 1869, drafted the clause granting equal rights to the women of the State for the first time at

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO ADD TO FOREST LANDS

OREGON MEASURE GOES TO SENATE; CALIFORNIA PROJECT OPPOSED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—About 697,000 acres of private land would be added to the Umatilla, Wallowa and Whitman national forests in Oregon, timberlands less valuable for forestry purposes being given in exchange under a bill passed today by the House and sent to the Senate.

Action of the House on a similar bill to include about 75,000 acres to the Stanislaus National Forest (California,) was objected to by various Republican members. The bill was introduced by Representative Raker, Democrat, (California,) but Republican members declared themselves against a policy of exchanging lands covered with timber for cut over lands and claimed the bill had been introduced for political reasons.

FARM CHIEF FLAYS FORD

Parley Chairman Says Auto Man Cooperative Market Foe; Coolidge Lauds System

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—An address by President Coolidge indorsing the co-operative marketing system and a criticism of Henry Ford by R. W. Bingham of Louisville, Ky., for asserted antagonism to farmers' co-operative organizations marked the opening here today of the third annual convention of the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Association.

Addresses by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois; Carl Williams of Oklahoma City, Okla., and A. J. McPhail, president of the Canadian Wheat Producers, Ltd., were other features of the meeting.

GIVES WARNING

Mr. Coolidge in an address to the association's members at the White House, described co-operative marketing as the best means of stabilizing the country's agricultural organization, but warned that the system possesses no magical attributes and must start from the soi land be developed upward with the farmers contributing the major adi.

Mr. Bingham, chairman of the meeting, in his criticism of Mr. Ford, referred to a recent issue of the Deaborn Independent, contain ton Co-operative Association and ing an article on the Staple Cot also read an attack on the manufacturer in the official organ of the association, published at Greenwood, Miss.

Despite attacks, commodity co-operative marketing movement, Mr. Bingham asserted, is stronger now in members, volume of business and achievement than every before and has the direct support of the Presiden t an d forward-looking financiers.

FAVOR ORGANIZATION

Former Gov. Lowden advocated co-poerative organization among corn, growers and dairy farmers and declared he thought he could foresee when "everything produced upon the farm, for the market, will be marketed by the farmers themselves through an organization of their own creation."

Pointing out that co-operative marketing raises the basic price of a product to all farmers, Mr. Williams said efforts this year should be directed toward bringing every member into an intelligent and loyal contact with the association's purposes and methods.

Mr. McPhail described the wheat-pooling method practiced in Western Canada. Over half the wheat acreage in Saskatchewan has been pledged in five-year contract pool, directed by the farmers, he said.

Omaha County Attorney is Preparing Charges

Failure of This Effort Will Bring Murder Trial

Slain Wife's Remains to Go to Former Home

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

OMAHA (Neb.) Jan. 5.—While relatives of Mrs. Mae Hahne, whose body was found battered and bruised in the basement of her home last Friday, made arrangements to transport the body to her former home in Colorado Springs, Colo., County Attorney Henry Beal was making arrangements to file insanity charges against J. Warren Hahne, her husband, who is accused in her death.

If, however, he should be unable to prove Hahne insane, he said, he would immediately retry Hahne on a first-degree murder charge, as recommended by a Coroner's jury, and demand the death penalty. The insanity hearing, however, will probably not be held for a week, Beal said, during which time alienists will examine Hahne closely.

Any reports that Hahne would not receive the support of both his wife's and his own relatives, who have arrived here, were dispelled today when they declared they would assist Hahne until "it was proven he was guilty."

Hahne was not permitted to remain in South Omaha for the funeral this afternoon, although he was there previously to view the body for the last time.

"I'll fight the insanity charges to the last ditch," Hahne said, when informed of the County Attorney's plan. "Why, I'd rather go to the electric chair than spend the rest of my days in an asylum."

COURT UPHOLDS SEIZURE OF SHIP

Bay City Judge Quashes Move to Suppress Evidence

Many Under Indictment in Rum-Running Quiz

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—The seizure off San Francisco of the British steamer Quadra with its cargo of supposedly illicit liquor valued at $500,000 was regular in every way and not in contravention of any treaty, United States District Judge Partridge held here today in quashing motions to suppress certain evidence against the Quadra. Nearly two score persons, including the crew of the Quadra, T. R. Anderson, a prominent Vancouver attorney, and a number of Americans are under indictment here as a result of the supposed rum-running activities of the vessel.

Judge Partridge held that the officers and crew of the Quadra "were apprehended in the violation of the laws of the United States.

The treaty of May 22, 1924, entered into between the United States and Great Britain to curb rum-running, legalizes the seizure of a vessel outside the territorial waters of the United States in the event that she is suspected of rum-running, and the proper punishment of all responsible for such activity, Judge Partridge held. The number of rum-running and other cases "has almost overwhelmed the court," he said.

Judge Partridge held that the evidence against the Quadra had been lawfully secured and cannot be suppressed nor returned, despite various contentions that the vessel was taken in defiance of treaty rights and outside of the water areas where the prohibition forces of the nation are permitted to operate

The Quadra was taken by the Coast Guard cutter Shawnee on October 12 after it had been boarded and searched on the high seas.

TENURE LAW CASE LOST BY TEACHER

Measure Unconstitutional, Superior Court Rules in Test Suit

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SANTA ROSA, Jan. 5.—The "teachers' tenure law," passed by the California Legislature in 1921 is unconstitutional because it applies to schools with a faculty of eight or more teachers and does not apply to schools with smaller faculties, according to a decision in Superior Court here today.

The decision was handed down by Superior Judge R. L. Thompson of Sonoma county, sitting for Judge Percy S. King of Napa county, who was disqualified because his wife is a Napa school trustee.

The law provides that any instructor who teaches "successfully" two or more years in a school having a faculty of eight or more be assured of "permanent tenure" of her position unless he or she be removed by charges of unfitness or incapability proved before the school trustees.

The action was brought by Isadora Grigsby, a woman teacher in the Napa schools employed for three school years and last spring notified by the school board that her position as instructor of an "opportunity class" had been discontinued. Her suit for reinstatement failed.

More Spurious Money Found in Honolulu Quiz

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

HONOLULU, Jan. 5.—Federal officials and police have started a searching inquiry into the source of the counterfeit currency, an additional $250 of which has come to light since the discovery last week of $43,000 of it in a deserted house on the water front. The $250 was passed in orriental stores.

United States Marshal I. Cox left for Hilo tonight to bring back James Gilman, boatswain on the steamer Matsonia, who, two men arrested in Honolulu said, had given them the $43,000 to keep.

ISINGLASS PRODUCTION

Isinglass is the commercial name for dried swimming bladders of several varieties of fish. The amount of gelatin in isinglass is from 86 to 98 per cent and even more. It is prepared by tearing the air bladder or sound from the back of the fish, from which it has been loosened by striking several blows with a wooden club, then washing in cold water. The black outer skin is removed with a knife, again washed and spread on a board to dry in the open air, with the white shiny skin turned outward. To prevent shriveling or shrinking, the bladders must be fastened to a drying board. The best quality of isinglass comes from sounds that are dried in the sun. After drying, the sound is again moistened with warm water and the interior shiny skin is removed by hammering or rubbing. Finally, it is rolled between two polished iron rollers.

NOTE MENTIONS VIOLATED ARTICLES

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

LONDON, Jan. 5.—An unofficial translation of the Allied Ambassador's note to Germany on the postponement of the Cologne evacuation follows:

"Article 429 of the Treaty of Versailles of June 28, 1919, stipulates that Germany territory situated to the west of the Rhine together with the bridgeheads shall be occupied by troops of the Allied and associated powers during a period of fifteen years to run from the entry into force of the treaty as a guarantee for the execution of said treaty by Germany.

"By the terms of Article 429 if the conditions imposed by said treaty have been faithfully carried out by Germany, the occupation foreseen in Article 428 shall successively be restricted at the expiration of the first five and then of the first ten years.

"The Allied governments already are in position to inform the German government without awaiting January 10, 1925, that they have obtained proof showing that Germany has not yet fulfilled and cannot possibly have fulfilled by that date the conditions laid down in Article 429 so as to enable her to benefit by the clause relating to a partial evacuation.

"Thus, by merely referring to Part Five of the Treaty, sufficient ground for the decision of the Allied governments is to be found in information collected by the Inter-allied Military Commission of Control, in spite of some obstruction in regard to the extent to which the military clauses have been carried out.

"For example, to mention only some essential points among facts already known, the following facts have been ascertained:

"In violation of Article 160, the great general staff of the (German) army has been reconstituted in another form; in violation of Article 174, short service volunteers have been recruited and trained; contrary to Article 168, the transformation of factories for the manufacture of war materials is far from being complete; contrary to Articles 164 to 169, a surplus of every kind has been found to exist beyond the amounts of military material allowed and considerable illicit stocks of war materials have been discovered; contrary to Article 162 and to the decision taken by the Boulogne conference of June 6, 1920, the reorganization of the State police has not begun; contrary to Article 211 the German government is far from having taken all the legislative and administrative measures demanded by the Allied governments in the note of September 29, 1922.

"The Allied governments, however, expect to receive a report of the Interallied Commission of Control giving the full results of the present general inspection. This report will enable them to determine what still remains to be done by Germany to carry out her obligations in military matters in the terms of Article 429.

"A further communication will be addressed to the German government on this subject."

INFANT IN BAG SURVIVES ZERO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—"It ain't got feathers and it ain't got hair," remarked 10-year-old Malachai Lischnitz as he tried to drag a wriggling object that made funny noises from a burlap bag found in a dump on Franklin avenue, the Bronx.

More than fifty children watched Malachai's exploration with interest.

"Then it ain't no chicken and it ain't no rabbit," remarked another lad who, with Malachai, found the sack with a string tied around its opening, and conveyed it to the Lischnitz home in the belief that it contained poultry, perhaps.

SOLVES MYSTERY

Mama Lischnitz appeared while the lads were endeavoring to solve the mystery.

"Here, let me," interposed the smiling matron as she inserted a capable hand into the bag and drew forth by one leg a baby boy not more than two hours old, blue with cold and kicking vigorously.

"Run you for Dr. Rednick," commanded Mother Lischnitz, hastily wrapping the infant in her apron, "while I give the baby a hot bath."

Forty children hurried after medical assistance while Mrs. Lischnitz and her neighbor, Mrs. Cora Kirshman, gave first aid to the foundling.

News of Malachai's find spread through the tenements with amazing rapidity. Several hundred residents in the block were talking it over when detectives from Bathgate-avenue station reached the Lischnitz home at 1357 Franklin avenue in an attempt to discover whose baby Malachai had rescued from death.

Physicians of Lincoln Hospital, where the infant was taken, said he had suffered no serious ill effects from exposure to almost zero temperature.

NO TRIAL OF McCORMICK SUIT LIKELY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The $500,000 alienation suit against Cyrus Hall McCormick, wealthy Chicagoan, probably will never come to trial.

This became apparent today, despite conflicting statements from the opposing attorneys.

"The case positively will be settled out of court," said Edward H. Burger, counsel for Edwin H. Jacobs, who charged the son of the founder of the International Harvester Company with fascinating his wife until she left him. On the other hand:

"There has been no agreement," said H. Starr Giddings, attorney for Mr. McCormick. "No money has been paid or promised, and none will be."

Mr. Burger disclosed that his client has withdrawn his earlier demand—a prerequisite he had set before any settlement—that Mrs. Jacobs return to their home at 507 West One Hundred Thirteenth street. She has been absent for several months.

Neither attorney knows the present whereabouts of Mrs. Jacobs, who is considerably younger than the plaintiff, so they said.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Dorothy Martin Hillman, pretty bride of Edward J. Hillman, Jr., son of a multimillionaire merchant, who fled to New York shortly after her marriage, has become reconciled to her husband. Dorothy's mother went to New York and retrieved the errant bride, who has been living in seclusion at the parental home since, while the forlorn husband paced the floors of the elegant, but lonesome home he had prepared for her. Meanwhile mutual friends were at work and the holiday spirit finally brought the pair together again.

NORSE GAVE NAME TO SHIP

The word "smack" in fishing smack is of Norse origin. The Danes and Norwegians called their vessels "shekka" or shake. These were long, lean galleys, and the resemblance was further suggested by the dragon's or snake's head which often formed their figurehead. Later on in history, when the Dutch became the great seafaring people, the word passed into their language, slightly altered (to suit their tongue) to "smak." The Dutch boat was of different build, being fat and broad-beamed. We in turn took the word from the Dutch, and turned it into our own smack, using it at first for the small sailing cutter which used to act as a sort of passenger tender for sea-going ships. Now, when steam is almost universal, we confine the word almost entirely to the fair-sized open sea fishing boat which works by sail.

STORKS IN GREAT BRITAIN

A Welsh lad was recently attacked by a large stork which was believed to have been blown from Holland by storms. It is a somewhat strange fact that storks have refused to breed in the British Isles except in Kew Gardens. There a pair started housekeeping in the year of King Edward's coronation, and clearly copied the design for their grotesque nest between the two elm trees from a coronation bonfire. They met with a multitude of misfortunes. One year a storklet fell from the nest and broke its neck; in another year a nestling was slain by a barnacle goose. A culminating disaster was the drowning of an entire family by a thunderstorm. When the "storks" mound becomes a congested district, superfluous storklets are exported to populate other districts.

FARM DRAINAGE AREA IS SMALL

Amounts to 9 Per Cent, Bureau Federation Head Says

Favors Development of Land Near Markets First

National Congress Will Join Fertile Land Body

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—In 1924 American farms numbered 6,400,000 and totaled 955,000,000 acres, of which only 5.5 per cent is artificially drained and of which 4.1 per cent needs draining, J. W. Coverdale, secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told members of the National Drainage Congress in their thirteenth annual meeting here today.

He said the government could do more for the American agricultural situation by helping to improve lands already under cultivation than by reclaiming remote regions.

"If improvements are made first in territories contiguous to markets, where haulage is short, the result will be helpful," said Mr. Coverdale. "Land development in regions far from railways or good highways serves only to bring grief to the colonisers."

It was decided to merge the National Drainage Congress with the National Fertile Land Association.

The union will be carried out in the final session Wednesday.

Attacks against the Isaak Walton League were made, centering on the trespassing of hunters and fishermen. Julius Boeck, president of the National Landowners' Association of Lansing, Iowa, led in this criticism.

"We have caused landowners to post their lands and charge small fees for permission to hunt and fish," he said. "But in many cases, this legal right has been ignored by the hunters."

L. A. Jones of the agricultural engineering staff of the Department of Agriculture spoke on "letting the law alone."

"Drainage laws are necessary to guide a group of landowners in getting an outlet drain that will benefit them all," he said.

LETTERS OF FORBES ARE INTRODUCED

War Department Asked to Supervise Hospital Work, Witness Says

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Col. E. F. Walton, formerly executive officer of the construction service of the Quartermaster General's office, contributed as a witness for the defense today in the Veterans' Bureau conspiracy trial, the testimony that Charles R. Forbes, former director of the Veterans' Bureau, sought to have the War Department take over supervision of the veterans' hospital work.

Col. Walton identified correspondence between Forbes and Secretary of War Weeks, in February, 1923, in which Forbes asked to have the Quartermaster-General's office prepare plans and specifications for the veterans' hospitals and to supervise the construction work at certain hospitals.

The witness further testified that Forbes had advised him in later conversations that all work should be handled on a strict contract basis and that nothing should be awarded on the cost-plus plan.

The original agreement between himself and Forbes, Col. Walton said, was that bids should be opened in the Veterans' Bureau but that contracts should be drawn and signed by the War Department. It was later determined by a Department of Justice ruling that Col. Forbes could not delegate authority to sign the contracts, the witness said, but his office continued to handle all other details of the construction program.

LUMLEY CASTLE OLDEST RESIDENCE IN ENGLAND

It is claimed that Lumley Castle, owned by the Earl of Scarborough, is the oldest residence in England. Lumley was first historically mentioned in the record of the gifts given by Skyr, son of Ulf, to the church of St. Cuthbert during the reign of Ethelred (978-1015.) The building continued in the state of a manor house till the time of Sir Ralph de Lumley, who fell at Cirencester, fighting against Henry IV. He had obtained licenses to embattle and crenellate his mansion from both Richard II and Bishop Skirlaw. The bishop's license predated the king's by three years, being granted in 1389. The place has been inhabited by a Lumley ever since its original erection, so that even if it be not the oldest residence in the country, it will be difficult to find one to beat it. The pedigree of the Lumley family is a long one and brought forth the remark from James I to the bishop of Durham, who was explaining it to him, "Oh! mon, gae na further, let me digest the knowledge I ha' gained, for by my soul I did no' ken Adam's name was Lumley." Llulph, the Saxon, who was murdered by some Norman followers of Bishop Walcher, in 1080, was an ancestor of the Lumley family. This crime led to a rising of the Saxons in the bishopric, during which Bishop Walcher was slain at Gateshead in the same year as Llulph met his death.

"Photography is a strange profession," said the young man, apropos absolutely of nothing at all.

"No. Not that exactly. The other day I had my photograph taken in my riding things—not on horseback, you knw, just standing with my crop in my hand. Today the photographer sent me word that the portraits are ready, and, do you know, he says that they are all mounted."

kind products worth considerably more than the amounts due them. France will put in a claim for back pay, as her receipts have fallen somewhat below the percentage allotted her at the Spa conference.

American reparation claims are estimated at $350,000,000. For purposes of a discussion of the American demand for a share in the Dawes plan receipts this amount, with the $255,000,000 which the American occupation cost, brings the total claim of the United States to $600,000,000. The American delegaion will have the support of France, Italy and Belgium.

Finance Minister Clementel is understood to have the opinion of a high legal authority to the effect that the American claims will undoubtedly be granted if referred to the international court. This authority argues that, although the United States did no ratify the Versailles Treaty, the Allies, by accepting the Dawes plan which absorbs the maximum of Germany's paying capacity, cannot thus rob America of all chances of recovering her claim.

MELLON FORESEES IMPORTANT RESULTS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—With the text of M. Clementel's "personal and unofficial" communication to Ambassador Herrick on the French debt question filed for information with the Debt Funding Commission, official Washington turned attention today principally to the more definite developments expected with relation to the status of American war claims against Germany when that subject comes up this week before the conference of Allied financial ministers in Paris.

Examination of M. Clementel's memorandum did not lessen the feeling in administration circles that it was a hopeful sign, although it contained no concrete proposal as to ways and means of refunding the French debt. The dispatch from Ambassador Herrick transmitting the document was sent by Secretary Hughes to Secretary Mellon as chairman of the funding commission. It was said definitely at the State Department, however, that it did not warrant the calling of a special meeting of the commission, since it was specifically confined, as Paris press advices had indicated, to expression of the Minister's own ideas on the question.

DETAILS ARE LACKING

Secretary Mellon's study of the memorandum failed to provide him with any information on the French views in addition to what he was said to have obtained already from his conversations with Ambassador Jusserand. In some quarters, it was expected he might send an informal request to M. Clementel for specific details on the suggestions already made. This, however, will not be definitely decided upon so long as there is hope that further word may come from Ambassador Herrick throwing new light on the subject.

The French Minister's course in submitting his ideas in the form of the memorandum was regarded at the Treasury as being a departure from the usual method in such matters, but no explanation of the procedure was advanced in any quarter.

The memorandum was not made public. It was regarded with interest in administration circles, however, because it appeared to set at rest any suggestion that France might be thinking of ignoring her war debt to the United States and also because it disclosed that French financial officers were at least giving serious thought to the subject of methods of refunding the debt.

RESULTS FORESEEN

When the first press comment came from Paris intimating that a formal proposal had been presented to Ambassador Herrick by the French government involving cancellation of interest to date and a ten-year moratorium and an eighty-year period of repayment thereafter with an amortization rate of one-half of 1 per cent, official Washington obviously expected something of a much more definite character than was received. It was not until the text of the memorandum was at hand today, in fact, that it was realized that the Paris government had not seen its way to initiating a refunding agreement by making a definite proposal.

There can be no question, however, that Secretary Hughes and Secretary Mellon feel that important results may flow from the conversations in Paris, possibly in the reasonably near future. It is hoped strongly that the wide discussion they have precipitated in both countries has helped to open the way for a definite move toward clearing up the situation.

In the meantime, Secretary Hughes has taken up the most recent British note contending that the full amount of American war claims against Germany should be chargeable against annuities to be paid by Germany under the Dawes plan. In his answer, dispatched yesterday to the London Foreign Office and for their information to Ambassadors Herrick and Kellogg and James A. Logan, American representatives at the coming Paris conference, the Secretary reaffirmed the attitude of the Washington government that the American claims were entitled to equal treatment with those of the Allied governments in the allocation of German payments by the conference.

WILLING TO WAIT

At the same time, the American communication, which was not made public, is understood to have reiterated a desire not to press unduly the question of the time of these payments and to have directed the attention of the British government to the previous expressions of willingness to arrive at a compromise with regard to the period over which the payments for both American Army of occupation costs and American war claims right be stretched.

"The Washington government does not see that there is anything about the claims it is presenting which requires reference to arbitration, as suggested in London. It has not filed any demands for reparations on its own account, the claims consisting of those made by American nationals and approved by the American-German commission set up for the purpose.

her about it until Congressman Moore spoke of it. Then Scott divided with her, she said.

Mrs. Scott branded as "malicious lies" the testimony of Miss Kennedy last week, concerning her conduct.

"I told Jane Kennedy how charming and clever Capt. Sumner was," the witness declared. "I told her how he even received his mail in this country just addressed to 'Jazzdo' because he was so well known and Jane said she wanted to meet him.

"I introduced them October 17, 1923. From that date until December 24, the day Mr. Scott and I parted, she came to my apartment more frequently than ever before while we were in Washington. I remarked about it to my husband and he said 'Well, don't you want her?' and I said I did not like to be alone all the time he was going to Michigan.

"I told Miss Kennedy that Harry Wycoff, clerk of the Wardman Park Hotel, came to my apartment one Sunday noon and I gave him some cigarettes but I never said he helped me to dress. Those are malicious lies."

KISSES DENIED

The witness also denied ever having told Miss Kennedy, as had been testified, that Wycoff used to wake her up with a kiss when he entered her apartment late at night. "Nor did we have any code of ice checks and bills to communicate with each other. I did not tell Jane Kennedy anything about a code. I was open and above board," Mrs. Scott testified.

Dispatches from Washington indicated that official circles of the capital are keeping close watch of the developments in the Scott case and especially the stories of wild parties, flowing liquor and gambling for high stakes adduced as evidence in the divorce suit.

These stories are worrying the moralists in the House of Representatives who maintain that Congressman husbands are usually a quiet domestic set, devoted to solitaire and unfermented fruit juices.

The most militant of moralists, Representative William David Upshaw of Georgia, shook his head and murmured "Terrible, terrible, too terrible to talk about." And then he added, "But such things are rare—very rare."

Ceremonies Are Conducted by Chamber of Commerce

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PICACHO (Ariz.) Jan. 5.—Construction work on the new Southern Pacific main line through Phoenix and the Salt River Valley was formally commenced here today amid appropriate ceremonies under the auspices of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce.

This work is a portion of the first link fifty-five miles in length from Picacho to Chandler, where it connects with Arizona Eastern, which will be reconstructed from Chandler to Hassayampa. From Hassayampa to Dome, a distance of 11½ miles, a new main line will be constructed, completing the new route. The total expense for the work is estimated by G. W. Boschke, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific, to be about $15,000,000.

MANY PRESENT

Various Arizona civic, agricultural and industrial organizations joined with the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce in the celebration which marked the dedication of the new line. Organizations represented at the affair included the Arizona Corporation Commission, Arizona Industrial Congress, Casa Grande Farm Bureau and chambers of commerce at Tucson, Florence, Tempe, Mesa, Nogales, Casa Grande and Chandler. Upon arrival here the delegates from the Arizona organizations were greeted by Southern Pacific officials from San Francisco, Los Angeles, El Paso, Tucson and Phoenix.

The celebration was formally opened by Master of Ceremonies Judge Kirk T. Moore of Tucson. He called upon President T. J. Elliott of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, and Senator H. B. Wilkinson of Phoenix, who donned overalls and lifted the first shovel full of dirt. This was followed by an address by E. W. Clapp, assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company, San Francisco.

CARRY OUT IDEA

"In constructing this line the Southern Pacific is carrying out an idea formulated years ago by the late Col. Epes Randolph, to place the Salt River Valley on a Southern Pacific main line," said Mr. Clapp.

"Col. Randolph was always one of Arizona's staunchest advocates. He it was who visualized the possibilities of Southern Arizona and who pointed out that with the construction of such a line and the development of an adequate water supply this country will become one of the richest agricultural sections in the Southwest. This I know from my long association with Col. Randolph as traffic official for the Southern Pacific in Arizona and the Arizona Eastern," continued Mr. Clapp.

OFFICIALS PRESENT

Officials of the Southern Pacific present who were then introduced, included George W. Boschke, chief engineer, San Francisco; A. E. Sweet, assistant general manager; W. C. Barnes, general freight agent; N. Kernell, general passenger agent, El Paso; E. J. Fenchurch, general freight and passenger agent; William Wilson, superintendent, Tucson; R. E. Kelley, executive representative, San Francisco.

Speakers expressed the fact that the celebration is a happy illustration of what can be accomplished through co-operation between the railroads and the communities which they serve.

George W. Boschke, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific, gave assurance that the work will be rapidly pushed from both ends and completed within the time limit under which the Interstate Commerce Commission authorization was issued.

C. E. Crowley, contractor, stated that 400 head of horses and mules and equipment to be used on this work are already on the ground. Lunch was served aboard Southern Pacific diners.

'PRESIDENT' SHIPS' SALE FURTHERED

Two Pacific Coast Lines With Committee Seeking Ten Government Vessels

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Negotiations for the sale of ten "President" liners operating between Pacific Coast and Far Eastern ports were resumed today after a holiday lapse when the Shipping Board's ship sales committee discussed terms and payments with prospective purchasers. The committee was in conference with Stanley Dollar of the Dollar Steamship Company and Gale Carter, president of the Pacific Mail Company, who are competing for the purchase of five of the ships.

The Pacific Mail is seeking to buy the five ships that it operates out of San Francisco, while Dollar desires these ships and the five that are being operated out of Seattle by the Admiral-Oriental Line.

The committee tomorrow will recommend to the board the publication of the annual omnibus advertisement for the sale of government tonnage. The Pacific deal cannot be consummated until this is done.

Commissioner Lissner is of the opinion that no bids for the President ships in question will be received until the middle of February or later.

Receipts at Pomona Break All Previous Records

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA, Jan. 5.—All annual records in postal sales for the Pomona postoffice were broken during the year 1924 with an increase of $8268.70 over 1923, which was a record year at that time, according to a report completed today by the postmaster.

The percentage of increase for the year 1924 over the preceding year was slightly over 13.2 per cent. Each quarter registered a record amount of business over the same quarter for the previous year and the final quarter climaxed the year with an increase of $3044.93 over the same quarter in 1923.

Coal Strike in Chicago Averted; Will Arbitrate

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Chicago's threatened fuel famine, with attendant suffering and inconvenience, was averted late today when the striking coal teamsters and the Chicago Coal Merchants' Association agreed to submit their differences over wages and working conditions to arbitration.

After a three-hour session the labor committee of the employing body and the union heads emerged with the announcement that State's Attorney Crowe had been agreed on as sole arbiter and that pending his decision the teamsters would go back to work as usual Tuesday morning.

The strikers' pickets were recalled and arrangements were made to have emergency deliveries of coal sent out immediately. The unions involved ordered their men to return to work at the usual hour Tuesday.

BANK ROBBERS FORSAKE IOWA

Vigilante System of State Too Efficient

Kansas Urged to Copy Plan; Situation Grave

Insurance Companies Cancel Theft Policies

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—It looks as though there might be hard times ahead for those bandits who have specialized in taking money away from unarmed bank clerks. Bankers of a number of States are organizing to fight the hold-up men with pistols, rifles and shotguns.

Speaking of the average bandit suggests that there are a good many people in the United States who engage in the hold-up business. This is quite true. Until six years ago there were almost no daylight robberies. Then some enterprising safe cracker discovered that by going into a bank in office hours he could avoid difficulties with windows, doors and safes. An episode in which a mere $20,000 was removed from a bank called for headlines and front-page accounts in newspapers all over the country in 1918. Since then such affairs have become so frequent that only the papers of the locality concerned pay any attention to them unless an unusually large sum of money is involved.

INSURANCE MEN BALK

The banks have been inclined to take the hold-ups philosophically so long as no employees were killed. The insurance companies, who are obliged to make good the losses, have been doing most of the worrying. But gradually insurance companies have raised rates on hold-up insurance and the bankers have begun to see that they cannot continue to support the steadily growing parasitic class of bank bandits.

W. W. Bowman, a Kansas financier, recently warned the bankers of his State: "If this crime wave is not terminated or controlled there is danger that insurance companies may withdraw protection altogether. This danger is imminent."

Insurance companies have begun to do this. In the St. Louis district insurance companies have closed out entirely their premiums with outlying banks because the losses were greater than the premiums.

In their difficulty the bankers are turning to the Iowa plan, which has reduced bank robberies in that State from about sixty a year to a very small number.

Iowa was the first State to organize in order to protect its banks. In 1921 bankers and insurance men all over the State were desperate over an average of at least one hold-up a week. An Iowa banker happened to mention the situation to Gen. F. H. Phillips, secretary of the National Rifle Association, and the general suggested that armed vigilance committees be formed.

VOLUNTEERS ARM

This idea was adopted. Groups of volunteers who lived in the vicinity of certain banks, or who lived along neighboring highways, were sworn in as special deputy sheriffs, with authority to act in the case of a bank disturbance. Each vigilante was armed and the groups were to meet at stated times for target practice.

The system has worked remarkably. Each central telephone office has a list of members of the organization and, in event of an alarm sent in by a bank, central immediately calls the members of the local committee. In most communities if she gets the warning to the man she is given a $25 reward by the banks. The vigilantes dash out to follow the bandits or to cut off their escape. Sometimes spiked chains are laid across the roads by which the fleeing bandits are expected to leave town. At other places members of the committee wait in ambush.

This may sound like no more effective pursuit than the police would regularly offer, but it should be remembered that police departments are frequently short of men, and in an emergency they cannot always throw an adequate force into the breach. Iowa has more than 3000 vigilantes, and each of the ninety-nine counties has at least one organization. Knowing that the vigilantes are ready at any time to start on a hot chase has taken all the enthusiasm out of the bank bandits. Iowa's bank hold-up record in the past year has consisted of two partially successful robberies and a number of cases in which the vigilantes captured the offenders.

OTHERS COPY PLAN

This record speaks for itself so loudly that other States have become interested. California, Illinois, North Dakota and Kansas have established or are considering plans similar to the Iowa vigilantes.

Kansas bankers say that their State has become the worst territory in the country for bank robberies. Every year there are considerably more than fifty burglary and hold-up attacks, and in consequence Kansas banks are paying to insurance companies the highest bank hold-up rates in the United States. These Kansas insurance rates are three times as high as the rates asked in Iowa since that State has been protected by its armed guards.

The National Rifle Association, which has been working with the vigilantes and urging them to become expert marksmen, points out that the bankers are giving the country a practical demonstration of the effectiveness of lawful and intelligent use of firearms against armed criminals.

GENERAL OF MEXICO IS DISGRACED

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 5.—Brig.-Gen. Francisco Dias Hernandez has been dismissed from the Mexican Army in disgrace by President Calles. The general is charged with misusing 40,000 pesos given him with which to pay troops under his command. Gen. Hernandez has been in charge of Federal troops operating against small rebel bands in the State of Hidalgo. He took a prominent part in rounding up the guerrilla leader, Gen. Cavazos.

Recently he requested the War Department to supply him with money to pay his troops, who were in bad shape from their hard campaigning. He was given 40,000 pesos for that purpose. President Calles received a memorial a few days ago from officers and men serving under Gen. Hernandez, in which it was charged he had not paid any of the money over to them, and asking that he be compelled to do so. Calles at once ordered an investigation which resulted in substantiation of the charges.

The Chief Executive has announced that in future all officials who misuse public funds, whether civil or army officers, will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. In accordance with this edict Gen. Hernandez, in addition to being dismissed from the army, will be prosecuted in the courts.

PLATICAS DE LOS LUNES

Por Heliodoro Dueñes

NUMERO 11

Tema: El Galicismo de Construcción

Reprochan (y con razón sobrada) los linguistas castellanos, el abuso que hacen los autores modernos, no solo de voces afrancesadas, sino de giros franceses, sustituyendo a los genuinamente castellanos. Es indiscutible que en nuestra época nadie habla ni escribe usando el léxico del arcipreste de Hita, ni de Cervantes, ni siquiera de Quintana; la evolución del idioma requiere nuevos giros y el uso de distintos vocablos a los que emplearon los clásicos. Pero de una evolución que gradualmente va enriqueciendo nuestra lengua, a la rebelión de que dan muestras los autores que indiscretamente acomodan frases extranjeras y retuercen los conceptos para acomodar traducciones literales, que resultan exóticas en nuestra literatura, hay una enorme diferencia.

Uno de los giros más comunes en la literatura moderna, es el abuso del posesivo en las construcciones, constituyendo un galicismo digno de corrección. Dice de Toro y Gisbert que "los franceses todo lo hacen suyo: se ponen su sombrero en su cabeza, se meten sus manos en sus bolsillos." La oración; muy común por cierto: "volvieron sobre sus pasos", es un galicismo que fácilmente se corrige diciendo "volvieron piés atrás", o simplemente "volvieron atrás", siendo más breve y tan elegante como la afrancesada.

Es muy común ver escrito, por ejemplo: "combatió con un valor a toda prueba" frase en la que el artículo indeterminado "un" está sobrando, pero que imita la construcción francesa." Tuvo un cierto gesto de sorpresa", escribe un autor moderno que debió escribir en castellano: "tuvo cierto ademán de sorpresa".

También se abusa ahora extraordinariamente del gerundio: "La ley concediendo pensiones, ordena . . ." en vez de "la ley que concede . . ." "no soy más que un filósofo, entendiendo la filosofía como la entendían los antiguos", es locución de un escritor moderno de nota. Si el autor aludido hubiera puesto "que entiende la filosofía. . ." nada hubiera perdido en cuanto a elegancia y hubiera ganado un elogio por apegarse a la Gramática de su lengua. El eminente Cuervo, al referir este mismo ejemplo, dice: "Es galicado e insoportable el empleo del gerundio cuando refiriéndose a un sujeto que desempeña la acción del verbo, (o sea el sujeto de la frase, como dicen los gramáticos), sirve para darle a conocer o para limitar y fijar su significado."

NUMERO 12

Mientras más se profundiza en los estudios filológicos, más se adquiere la convicción de que es imposible llegar a escribir o hablar el castellano sin cometer errores reprochables por los puristas. Las opiniones contradictorias que encontramos en los tratadistas, opuestas muchas veces a las reglas establecidas por la Real Academia Española, explican por sí solas la actitud de rebeldía de muchos autores que no se resignan fácilmente a gastar su tiempo en la busca de vocablos y construcciones de intachable factura, con mengua quizá de la forma en que concibieron sus ideas. El mejor consejo que puedo dar a los lectores de estas pláticas, por lo tanto, es que lean mucho de los autores clásicos castellanos y que de los modernos escojan aquellos consagrados por la crítica; de esta manera, insensiblemente irán adquiriendo una manera elegante y muy aproximada a la perfección, para expresarse en el hermoso lenguaje de Castilla.

Estas consideraciones las he hecho al pasar revista a una lista de galicismos que contiene un tratado de filología que he consultado, para insertar en esta plática una parte de la referida lista, y encontrar que mas de la mitad de los términos que contiene y que aconseja el autor sean rechazados al hablar o escribir en castellano, aparecen sancionados por la Academia, en la última edición de su diccionario.

A. Esta preposición está mal usada en las siguientes frases: "El yugo de la virtud es pesado al hombre" (debe decirse para el hombre). "A tales hombres nada les es imposible", (para tales hombres nada es imposible). "Vender a pérdida", (con pérdida). "Bordado a la aguja" (de aguja) "A lo que veo, nada hay que hacer." (por lo que veo). "Desprecio a todo lo venerable". (de todo) "Odiar a muerte." (de muerte). De igual manera que los títulos de las tiendas, que tan comunes son, principalmente en América, que se llaman: "Al puerto de Santander" "A la Villa de Paris" y que para nada necesitan de la preposición.

"ACUSAR un buen corazón", frase muy común: debe rechazarse y en lugar de acusar puede ponerse revelar o manifestar. APERCIBIR, se usa muy comunmente en lugar de divisar, atisbar o advertir. Apercibir significa siempre prevenir, disponer, preparar lo necesario para una cosa, amonestar o hacer un requerimiento legal.

ATACAR, es un error si se aplica en vez de impugnar o de combatir. Es muy común decir "Atacar un dictamen, atacar las instituciones, atacar el régimen" y en estos casos está mal aplicado el verbo.

Independent Candidate in Iowa Asserts Fraud Aided Senator's Election

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Luther A. Brewer of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, independent candidate for United States Senator in Iowa at the last election, announced here tonight he would serve notice on Senator Smith W. Brookhart tomorrow of an intention to contest the election of Brookhart who holds the certificate of election as Senator from Iowa for the term beginning March 4, 1925.

In his notice of contest to Senator Brookhart, which is the first required legal step toward a formal contest, Brewer will assert that a recount of ballots which have been preserved would wipe out Brookhart's plurality and that there were frauds and irregularities in the election sufficient to account for Brookhart's asserted election.

Finally Brewer says that Brookhart should not be seated "because he cannot consistently take the oath of fealty to the Constitution of the United States required of a Senator because he has publicly declared that the soviet form of government is superior to the government of the United States whereas the soviet form of government is inconsistent with and at war with the Constitution of the United States.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Make One Look Twenty Years Younger

Men and women who want to be rid of the gray hair and Grandma are now using the simple home mixture. Mrs. Thompson, J. A. McCrea, a well-known Oklahoma, recently made the following statement:

"I myself was a simple mixture of sage and sulphur that will darken gray hair when it is dull and glossy. To make it, take a half-pint of water, add one tablespoonful of sage, a small box of Wyeth's Sulphur, ½ oz. of glycerine. This home-made mixture can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with comb. It takes effect after the scalp is not sticky and will not rub off."

FOREIGN WIFE'S RIGHTS DENIED

Widow of Japanese Aviator in Difficulties

Mother-in-Law is Hostile Toward Alien

Sons Not Permitted to Leave Land of Birth

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TOKIO, Jan. 5.—A quarrel between a daughter-in-law and a mother-in-law as regards the future and custody of the former's children is causing considerable comment all over Japan today. The rift in the family lute is aggravated by the fact that the daughter-in-law is a foreigner—a petite Parisienne—while the mother-in-law is Japanese.

Already the French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, and Foreign Minister Shidehara have been appealed to and are endeavoring to bring about a satisfactory compromise; while the French residents in Japan, aggrieved at the manner in which one of their country-women has been treated, are collecting contributions for the unfortunate young lady.

The lady in question is the French wife of Baron Shigeno, well-known aviator, who died some two months ago, leaving behind his widow and two sons, aged 3 and 2 years respectively. The trouble is all over the future of these two children, and red tape has conspired to make the situation unusually delicate.

BAR SINISTER LAID

The marriage of Baron Shigeno to the pretty Parisienne was not recognized by the registration bureau of the Imperial Household Department and, in consequence, the issue was not registered, either. The children are regarded as illegitimate—though in Japan this does not carry the slur that goes with illegitimacy in many another land.

On the death of Baron Shigeno, the question of who should succeed to the baronetcy cropped up. At first great efforts were made by the mother of Baron Shigeno to have the succession conferred on a 16-year-old daughter, by Baron Shigeno's first (Japanese) wife. This, it was not possible to do, because the law of succession does not permit a woman to succeed direct to a title.

Still, the mother-in-law was prepared to overcome the obstacles by declaring that the daughter was of marriageable age and that her husband should succeed to the title. To find a husband, she added, was no very hard task.

The French widow, however, vehemently protested, insisting that her children should succeed to their father's title. The Imperial Household Department later consented to this, but an even more knotty problem afterward cropped up.

MOTHER-IN-LAW OBDURATE

Baroness Shigeno proposed that she should return to France and educate her children there, the heir to return in good time to occupy his father's position. This was immediately frowned upon, on the ground that, then, the future baronet would not be a Japanese, but a Frenchman, totally ignorant of Japanese language and customs. The heir, it was declared, must be educated in Japanese style. The mother-in-law further complicated matters (and mothers-in-law have tremendous powers in Japan) by insisting that the younger son also must be educated and brought up as a Japanese, as his assistance and aid would be needed by the elder brother.

The widow suggested that she return to France and earn a livelihood by keeping a hotel for Japanese and other Oriental visitors to Paris. Since her children can't go with her, she has had, however, to abandon this plan.

Thereupon she suggested that she should remain in Japan, live separately from her husband's family, and earn a living by teaching music and French. This was also rejected by the mother-in-law who characterized such conduct as unseemly for the privileged classes.

At this stage Baroness Shigeno appealed to the French Ambassador who took the matter up with the Foreign Minister. Baron Shigeno was a poor man and, with his death the government pension given went to the baron's mother.

Gossip Sends Lively Matron to Her Death

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Gossiping women sent Elizabeth Saunders, young matron, to her death in the Thames, according to a pathetic note to her husband, read at the autopsy. The letter said:

"Dear Will: I am going. I can not stand the women's tongues. Remember I have never done a moment's wrong; only larking about. Be good to the children. Tell them they had a good mother. Your faithful wife, Bess."

BAY CITY POLICE TAKE OVER ROBBER SUSPECT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—William Schmidt, alias William Ryan, arrested here a week ago in connection with the robbery of messengers employed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, was taken back to San Francisco last night by two police officers of that city. Schmidt's 18-year-old wife accompanied her husband and officers. When Schmidt was arrested he told the police he had spent every cent of $2700, his share in the loot, in high living and buying expensive coats and dresses for his wife. It developed, however, that he had $1500 cached against a rainy day, and this amount was turned over to the police. The Schmidts also gave up several rings, the proceeds of other robberies.

CONTESTS MOTHER'S WILL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 5.—Mrs. Lillian Handlan Lamp, divorced wife of the late William J. Lamp, head of the former Lamp Brewing Company, brought suit in Circuit Court here to determine the validity of the will left by her mother, Mrs. Mollie A. Handlan, who died March 24 last. She contends in her action that at the time the will was drawn her mother was incapable of distributing her property because of her advanced age, and was unduly influenced by her son, Eugene W. Handlan, who was willed the bulk of the estate said to be worth about $30,000.

Christine of the Hungry Heart

by Kathleen Norris

THE STORY SO FAR

After a few years of marriage Christine Knight, young, beautiful and rich, realizes that she is desperately unhappy. However, because she does not believe in divorce, she decides to make the best of her life with her adored little daughter, Betty-Lou and her equally-loved but neglectful husband, Stuart. She and Dr. Alan Monteagle, who have recently met, find themselves in love with each other, decide not to see each other again. Then one day Stuart, driving with the woman whose society calls his attention, runs into his mother's car, and almost kills Christine. Alan hastens to her side, and by work or night and night, pulls her back to life. Christine decides to leave her husband, and as soon as she gets her divorce, marries Alan.

On the day that Geoffrey Alan Monteagle, Jr., was 2 years of age, his mother carried him down to a shaded corner of her beautiful garden, and enthroned him on the grass, the better to admire and glorify him. Jeffy—for they called him Jeffy, was also attended by Cilly, the colored nurse, and by his lovely little half-sister, Betty Lou, who was 6 years of age, and who filled her little arms joyfully with his rabbits and bears and brilliantly colored picture books.

A maid came out carrying a card, but so closely followed by the caller, who had given it to her that Christine Monteagle had only time to say delightedly "Dan!" and to start to her feet, when she found herself receiving a fraternal kiss, and could put both arms about her beloved foster-brother's neck.

"Dan—you darling! And I did not know that you had even time to get my note!" Christine exclaimed. "It's his birthday, Dan, isn't he adorable? Say Dan', Jeffy—Jeffy, say 'Dan' for mother! And look at your Betty Lou, Dan, aren't we getting big? Kiss Uncle Dan, Sweet. Do you remember him? Don't you remember the little store with all the pots and pans? Dan, sit down—"

"A year is too long!" Dan Madison protested, affectionate eyes upon her. Both the children were in his arms now, and Jeffy was fingering his eye-glass case with busy, fat little hands. "Chris, what a beautiful place to live in."

"To think you haven't seen it! And this is our second summer. Yes, we love it. Both Alan and I think it's the loveliest place at Friends Crossing.

"Do you get everything you want, Chris?" Dan asked, his eyes traveling about the little inclosed garden. On the southern end rose the house, a white colonial mansion.

"The house is really old!" boasted Chrissie, her glance following his. "It isn't large, you know—mais chic! You asked me if I always get everything I want. Of course, I do!"

"Pretty gown!" Dan remarked, conscious of inadequacy.

"This old thing! Wait until you see the women at the club. Some of them have a new gown every Saturday," Chrissie responded, pleased with his praise nevertheless. "I'm going to take you to the club, later. Alan's there. He's displaying just the least modicum of common sense, lately, by staying home Saturdays, and sleeping late. And at about 11 he and some of the men go off and play eighteen holes. It's simply making him over!"

"He looked awfully thin, last year," Dan said.

"Oh, he was a wreck! Hospital work always kills him," Chris assented." I'm jealous of it—I admit it. He's mine, first, after all! The other doctors' wives think I'm crazy—they say there's fame in it—and money in it! But we don't want any more fame or money! All I can say is," finished Chris radiantly," that their wives don't love their husbands as I love mine!"

"That's a good thing to hear," Dan commented, smiling.

"Four years last January, and I'm madder about him than ever!" the woman confessed suddenly.

"You sent for me," said Dan, expectantly, then.

"Well, not exactly sent," the woman corrected him, quickly. "But—I had the blues, and I wanted to see you, and I had a letter from the Knights—" she summarized. "I didn't mean you to rush. —I just wanted to see you!"

"The blues—what about?" Dan asked, with an anxious look.

"Because I am an absolute nit-wit!" answered Chrissie gaily. "I get terribly—fed up—on this life of ours, you know. Alan doesn't—he's away all week. But it's the same women—the same luncheons—the same gossip, day after day! We go to the Bennets' and play bridge, we go to the Huntingtons' and play poker, we have the Bennets and the Huntingtons to dinner. We go to the Saturday night dance at the club!"

"How does Alan like it?"

"Well, he loves it. In the first place, he has his work, in town. And then the golf—you know what golfers are—"

"But you play golf, Chrissie. You used to play splendidly!"

"Oh, I still do. But you see—you know how these little groups are? I do play 'round with Alan, sometimes, on a week-day that he happens to be home—we both love it. I could perfectly well play with the men Saturdays and Sundays, I can hold my own splendidly—play better than most of them, in fact! But if I do it, the other women want to do it, and, of course, that ruins the whole thing!"

"And if you play," Dan grinning, "you play with the women?"

"Which I hate!" Chrissie said, making a face.

"The truth is," Chrissie admitted, looking mischievous and penitent at once, "the fault is with me. I want Alan all to myself! We've had such wonderful years, you know—just we two. Europe, for those wonderful seven months, and California, and Bermuda, and I just can't bear to have the world creep in between us. I hate my wedding anniversaries—anything that reminds me that time is going! Now, I'll tell you what I hope," she interrupted herself, with a sudden change of tone. "This is August. I hope that in December Alan and I can run away again—to Spain. Wouldn't that be heavenly—we didn't get into Spain, you know, and I have always wanted to! The idea would be to leave the baby and Cilly in Paris, and cruise about, with an apartment there as a base."

"But what about Betty Lou?" Dan asked.

"Well, now that's what I wanted to discuss with you, Dan," Chrissie assured, suddenly solemn. "I have not mentioned any of this to Alan, because I wanted to work out some of the details first. He has so much on his mind! You see I've had a letter from Mrs. Knight."

"Yes, she said she'd written," Dan nodded.

"She wants—she begs for Betty Lou, they've only seen her once in four years," Christine said, in a somewhat troubled voice. "And Betty Lou, might love it, there—they would spoil her, of course, but she'd come right 'round again."

"I hate to give her up," Betty Lou's mother protested ruefully, "but I'm getting really worried about Alan! Nothing's settled, of course."

"Stuart is back in Washington," Dan said suddenly.

"Do you see him?" she asked, briefly.

"I heard he had straightened out, and then somebody told me he was all off the reservation, again," Dan continued.

"H'm!" Chrissie mused. "It's all like a bad dream. I can't imagine myself as anything else but Alan's wife—forever and ever, amen!"

NEW YEAR REVELS IN PEORIA TO BE AIRED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PEORIA (Ill.) Jan. 5.—Wild New Year's Eve parties, staged in various restaurants and roadhouses patronized by the fast set, will be aired before the grand jury as a result of the death of Walter Klenast. The driver of the car that killed Klenast is said to have celebrated the evening in a restaurant where unlimited liquor and a nude dancing girl are said to have provided thrills for those having "ringside" seats. It is argued that the driver of the car, as a result of this revelry, was in no condition to drive. On the heels of this revelation came details of other parties at road-houses where the entertainment was even more daring.

CARBON MONOXIDE

Carbon Monoxide poisoning will continue as long as devices which PRODUCE carbon monoxide are used. A so-called "vent" will NOT protect you. Many of the accidents from carbon monoxide poisoning are by vented appliances and in many cases the down-draft in the vent flue causes the accident. A gas heater that generates carbon monoxide and depends upon a vent to remove it is unsafe.

There is only one way to deal with carbon monoxide. DO NOT CREATE IT. Do not use any device, vented or non-vented, that produces carbon monoxide.

Once carbon monoxide is produced, no one can control it. Drafts come down vent flues as well as go up. Your safe course is to secure authentic proof that the heating appliances you buy will not produce carbon monoxide to the slightest extent.

The U. S. Bureau of Standards at Washington can test for carbon monoxide to one one-thousandth of one per cent and will issue a clean bill of health on any appliance that can pass the test. Local tests are also available. PROTECT YOURSELF AND OTHERS BY REQUIRING THIS TEST IN YOUR HEATING DEVICES.

Riverside Woman Married Fifty-six Years Gives Good Advise to Modern Maids

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 5.—"Have I a set of rules for brides; a chart for them to escape shipwreck on matrimonial seas?" asked Mrs. David Deaver, 467 Mulberry street, when celebrating her fifty-sixth wedding anniversary today. "Indeed I have not. Girls of today are far brighter, far smarter, are more clever than when I was a girl. I do not need to give them my advice."

"Well, then, why is it that there are so many shipwrecks before the first mile is passed," she was asked.

"Because they did not get the right man, to be sure to get the right man is the only sound advice you can give to avoid divorce. To do this you should know your fiancee well.

"A year or so acquaintance is nothing to judge a life partner. I knew David ten years before we were married." Some quick mathematics made one wonder just how far back this romance dated. "When I was a girl eight years old I first met David. He was a playmate of my older brothers. The two of them were teasing me when I thought it was about time to defend myself and so I pulled his hair, that was my introduction to him. After that we were good friends and when I was eighteen years old and he was twenty-seven we were married. I never thought the main object of matrimony was to look for happiness.

"I considered it my job, my profession, to look after my house and my husband, just as two people go into any other kind of partnership. When two parties set up business neither one has happiness as the one definite object in mind. They know there will be difficulties to overcome and hardships to endure along with the pleasures of the venture. We were pioneers in Kansas and a pioneer and his wife had their work cut out for them to earn their daily bread. We had plenty to do and we were very happy."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Deaver are in perfect health and Mrs. Deaver's hobby is her housework while Mr. Deaver loves to dig in the garden and chop wood. He is 83 years old and has a vivid memory of scenes his friends love to connect with his experiences with early life as a plainsman.

Rancher Begins Long Term in State's Prison

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VISALIA, Jan. 5.—Charles P. Journey, Tulare rancher, will leave Visalia tonight in company with Deputy Sheriff Charles Smith for San Quentin penitentiary, where he will begin his sentence of from ten years to life for killing his father-in-law, Peter Jacobsen, aged Tulare rancher, in October.

Journey's affairs are in order, his visiting is done, he has bidden farewell to his children, who came from different points of Fresno, Kern, Tulare and Los Angeles counties to have one last visit in the Tulare County Jail here.

Mrs. Journey, his wife, from whom he was separated and for whom the fatal bullet which took Jacobsen's life was intended, did not come.

On Saturday afternoon, October 4, Mrs. Jacobsen, Journey's mother-in-law, was buried. After placing flowers on her grave he went to the Jacobsen ranch at suppertime to effect a reconciliation with his wife, from whom he was separated and who had come from Long Beach to her mother's funeral. Failing to make peace with her he became enraged, drew a gun and, while trying kill her, according to reports, shot his aged father-in-law instead, who gave his life for his daughter.

Some time later Journey was arrested in the northern part of the State and returned to the Tulare County Jail. He first pleaded not guilty to the charge of killing Jacobsen, later changing this to guilty, and was sentenced last week.

Business Men Hold Annual Get-Together

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 5.—Plans are complete for the annual banquet of the Riverside Business Men's Association, to be held Wednesday, January 14, at 6:30 o'clock in the Mission Inn. The dinner is to be preceded by a short stockholders' meeting in the adoba, for the purpose of electing directors for the new year. The business meeting will start at 6 o'clock.

The approaching dinner will be the association's one big "get together of the year." In the words of Secretary J. D. Lynch, "it is the time when we forget we are competitors—that we have differences of opinions—and gather together for mutual good. It is ladies' night, that our wives and sweethearts may learn that we can, on occasion, enjoy ourselves."

A well-balanced program has been arranged, with plenty of music and entertainment and an excellent speaker.

The latter is George J. Eberle, member of the firm of Eberle & Riggleman, Los Angeles counseling economists and statisticians, and professor of public utilities and statistics at the University of Southern California. His subject is to be a timely one, "Forecasting Business Conditions."

The dinner is to be followed by a dance in the music room of the Inn. Secretary Lynch has sent reservation blanks to members of the association.

Jug Explodes; Passersby Ask About Shooting

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 5.—Chief of Police Webb, Sergt. Bray and four patrolmen are all firm in their convictions that the most powerful moonshine liquor in Southern California was uncovered in a raid in the Mexican district of the city last night.

Raiding officers left a five-gallon jug in the sergeant's room, tightly corked. This morning it exploded, throwing glass about the room, which narrowly missed cutting Sergt. Bray, who was nearest the container. The explosion caused several people in the street to stop and inquire about the shooting.

JUDICIAL SESSION

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HUNTINGTON PARK, Jan. 5.—The Board of City Trustees announces that it will sit in judicial session at 8 p.m., the 19th inst., when a number of those circulating the petition for the recall of Mayor Milton O. Blanchard, Frank Fitch and Norman O. Byers are summoned to appear before them. The hearing was to have been held three or four weeks ago, but James O. Treadwell, a resident of this city, brought a suit of injunction in the Superior Court, to prevent the Trustees for calling the special election for their recall, and that injunction suit has been set for the morning of the 19th inst., which, it is expected, will be heard on that date.

The petition, which contained sixteen parts, asking for the special election, was filed with City Clerk Hunter some time ago, and later was returned to the board at a meeting, with the City Clerk's report. It was then said that some of the sections of the petition were not circulated as required by the recall laws, and a hearing was ordered by the three Trustees mentioned in the petition. The date was set, but in the meantime the injunction suit was filed and the hearing before the Trustees was continued.

JUDGE IN COURT AT VENTURA

Jurist Seeks to Recover Pay as Employee of State Road Commission

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OXNARD, Jan. 5.—Judge C. J. Elliott, justice of the peace of Oxnard was in the witness box at Ventura today instead of on the bench. He testified relative to his employment by the California State Highway Commission as right of way man and as to his salary. The local judge brought action against the County Treasurer for recovery of his salary for the month of April, 1924, $150, which was held back by the county on the grounds that the judge could not work for the Highway Commission and be a justice of the peace at the same time.

The judge has long worked on rights of way for the Highway Commission and during this particular month received $10 a day and expenses. He was always granted a leave of absence by the Board of Supervisors. If he is victorious in this case he will bring suit to recover pay for five other months which were held up owing to the fact that he was away from this city working on rights of way for the State.

Dist.-Atty. Henderson contended today in Superior Court that a member of the judiciary department of the State was performing the duties of an executive department and thereby violating the State Constitution. Attorney W. Mark Durley, representing the plaintiff, contends that this provision of the State Constitution refers only to State officers and has nothing whatever to do with township officials.

Judge Rogers of the Superior Court took the case under advisement before rendering a decision. Judge Elliott is well known throughout the State, having secured many important rights of way for the State Highway Commission. His chief work was securing rights for the Coast Road from Santa Monica to Oxnard. Other duties for the commission took him to San Diego, the Conejo and to the Ventura Boulevard between this county and Hollywood.

POLICEMAN KILLS MURDER SUSPECT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CALEXICO, Jan. 5.—R. D. Feathers, a negro wanted at Columbus, O., for the murder of a State prison guard, was instantly killed here last night by Chief of Police Joe Hardwick, when the latter attempted to arrest him. The chief visited the shack of the negro and entered, calling upon him to submit to arrest.

The negro instead seized a revolver and attempted to turn it on the officer, who seized the fugitive's arm and then managed to draw his own weapon. The pair struggled desperately for several minutes.

Six shots were fired by the chief into the negro's body. Other officers accompanying their chief said they were unable to assist him for fear of shooting him instead of the prisoner.

LONGEST JAIL SENTENCE

Man Sent to Hanford Bastille for Twenty-five Years

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, Jan. 5. — William Wilson, five times sentenced to State prison, is not in such an institution, but has commenced serving a sentence of twenty-five years in the Kings County Jail, under sentence of Judge Short of this city. In passing sentence the court denounced the injustice of his forced action, stating that no man could live in any County Jail that length of time.

A legal technicality caused all the trouble. Wilson, three years ago, was sentenced to San Quentin prison for twenty-five years for entering a store at Stratford, Kings county, by the use of explosives, and was later transferred to Folsom prison.

Judge Busick of Sacramento recently granted Wilson's application for a writ of habeas corpus holding that Wilson's crime was only a misdemeanor and not a felony.

The Kings county superior judge and District Attorney both agree that the County Jail sentence must be made, but it is probable that a bill will be introduced in the present Legislature to remove the technicality which requires a judge to sentence a man guilty of a felony to a term in jail which he would never live to fill.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

He was taken to the Emergency Hospital on Santa Fe avenue where first aid was given after which he was removed to one of the hospitals in Los Angeles.

DRY LEADERS BEFORE JURY

Investigation Continues in Orange County

Other Important Witnesses Are Called

Inquiry Result of Recent Liquor Raid

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Jan. 5.—Walter Weymouth, Federal prohibition leader in Southern California; Dr. S. T. Montgomery, head of the Anti-Saloon League, and E. S. Ward, his chief investigator, were summoned today to appear before the grand jury of Orange county which tomorrow will continue its investigation into liquor conditions and enforcement of the dry law. Also subpoenaed to appear tomorrow are Louis Plummer, Fullerton High School principal, and Thomas Askin, Fullerton real estate dealer.

The hearing will mark the last of those instigated by the District Attorney's office, it was declared, unless further sources of information are developed.

Weymouth, who headed recent county-wide dry raids here, was thought to be authority for charges published by Dr. Montgomery that the District Attorney and Sheriff had misstated facts to the Superior Court when two prisoners were released by habeas corpus proceedings. It was anticipated these charges would lead to a severe grilling at tomorrow's sessions.

Secretary Austin reported a balance in the treasury of the board from last year and announced that C. C. C. Tatum, well-known Los Angeles real estate man, is to address the weekly class in real estate practice at Chaffey High School Wednesday evening on the subject of "Advertising."

BOOST NEW HIGHWAY

Enthusiasts Meet at Newman on Saturday Night

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, Jan. 5.—Many chambers of commerce of the San Joaquin Valley, representing large cities and small towns as well, will have representatives at the meeting called for next Saturday night at Newman.

There is great interest in a new project, known as the West Side Highway, which passes through many counties between Tracy and Ventura. The last meeting, held at Taft, was largely attended.

Legislators from the Central San Joaquin Valley will, at the session of the Legislature just convening, endeavor to secure State aid for this road, which, it is said, will relieve the only State highway through the San Joaquin Valley located in the center of the valley from its present travel congestion, thus avoiding heavy pending cost for widening the roadway, while at the same time it will assist in opening up for settlement hundreds of thousands of acres of rich land now untilled.

CITY WINS FIGHT FOR INDUSTRIAL SECTION

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH GATE, Jan. 5. — From indications, this city has won its fight to hold a section of industrial territory, which was recently added by an annexation election. The territory concerned is the ground occupied by the California Clay Products Company, the California Cyanide Company and the Zellerbach Paper Company, the two former having large plants on the site, and the latter contemplating a mill.

A bill of equity to quash the election was brought by the California Cyanide Company and the city filed a demurrer which has been heard before Judge Hartley Shaw in the Superior Court. Breuton A. Hayne, City Attorney, announces that he has received word from the judge that the demurrer has been sustained by the court. The opposing attorney has been given twenty days in which to file an amended complaint.

LOTS OF PEP IN PEPPERS

Oxnard Police Without Gas Masks Prove Useless in Raid

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OXNARD, Jan. 5.—When Chief of Police Murray and his men went to an Enterprise-street address to search for liquor today the Mexican woman in the house saw them coming. She placed a pan of chili peppers on the stove and set a match to them and then ran from the building. The police started to search, but so strong were the fumes from the burning peppers and so strong the smoke that they hurried from the house rubbing their eyes and gasping for breath.

"That's the newest one on me," said Chief Murray today. "We'll have to wait until she runs out of peppers or provide gas masks for the officers."

Jealous Husband Breaks Up Tete-a-Tete Party at Breakfast Table

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 5. — When Alberto Gonzales of 2345 Delaware avenue came home early this morning and found his wife having breakfast with Veningno Macas, a roomer in the Gonzales home, he became enraged, drew a pocket knife and attempted to kill Macas, according to police. Macas was badly cut about the back, sustaining several deep gashes. Following the affair he ran from the house and sought shelter in the home of a neighbor.

According to Mrs. Gonzales her husband has been extremely jealous of Macas for some weeks, but she said the attack upon the roomer was made without cause.

Police are searching for the husband, who disappeared when Macas ran from the house. He will be charged with assault with a deadly weapon and attempt to kill.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BRAWLEY, Jan. 5.—Police are searching Brawley and vicinity for two Mexicans who killed Quen Gee, a Chinese groceryman when they robbed his store here. Gin Sing, a clerk in the store, was severely injured.

According to the story told by Gin Sing the Mexicans entered the store and pretended to be buying some groceries. When the proprietor leaned over, one of the Mexicans struck him a hard blow on the head, knocking him unconscious.

The Chinese recovered while the robbers were still in the store and attempted to attack them when they both turned on him and stabbed him. Twenty-seven knife wounds were found on the dead man's body.

Gin Sing said he also recovered consciousness about the time the robbers were attacking his employer, but he feared to resist them.

Shot Greets Bakersfield Highwayman

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 5.—Shot through the abdomen as he is said to have attempted to hold up the Victory service station, 429 Nineteenth street, last night, Elmer Rose, 20-year-old East Bakersfield youth, is at the County Hospital mortally wounded, according to police headquarters. Edward Merry, proprietor of the service station, shot Rose a few minutes after the latter is asserted to have entered the establishment and ordered Merry to get the money out of the cash register.

In an effort to secure a deathbed confession from the asserted bandit, Chief of Police Horace Dupes today went to the hospital. Rose was too far gone, however, to talk, hospital attendants said.

NEW OFFICERS TAKE PLACES AT VISALIA

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VISALIA, Jan. 5.—One Superior judge and three Supervisors were sworn in and entered upon their duties in Tulare county this morning. Superior Judge J. A. Allen began his new term. The Supervisors beginning new terms were F. M. Pfrimmer of Porterville, R. C. Sturgeon of Tulare and Charles H. J. Hausch of Visalia.

Among important matters to be considered immediately by the Board of Supervisors is whether Tulare county shall purchase the 35 per cent interest in Kings county in the Tulare-Kings county tuberculosis sanatorium at Springville, Tulare county and conduct the institution alone. Lack of harmony in joint management of the sanatorium is said to have projected this problem. A new $65,000 children's ward has just been opened there.

CHICAGO LOSES WATER APPEAL

Supreme Court Blocks Plan to Draw from Lake

Decision Necessitates Shift of Sewage Flow

Meeting Will Request Help from Weeks

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Chicago today lost its appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States for permission to make permanent the withdrawal of 10,000 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan for the purpose of flushing its sewage through the Chicago and Illinois rivers to the Mississippi.

The injunction issued by Judge Carpenger in the Federal District Court restraining the sanitary district from diverting more than 250,000 cubic feet of water per minute was affirmed by the Supreme Court.

The decision will necessitate a change in the sewage disposal in the Chicago district. Engineers have estimated that sludge plants for the treatment of sewage that now moves into the Chicago River and the drainage canal will cost upward of $200,000,000.

The injunction is to go into effect in sixty days without prejudice to any permit which may be issued by the Secretary of War.

Trustees of the sanitary district called a public meeting in the City Council chamber Saturday to which the presidents of villages and village boards within the district, Congressmen, legislators and representatives of clubs and civic organizations are to be invited. Its purpose will be to draft a plea to the War Department and the Rivers and Harbors Committees of Congress seeking temporary relief.

The Federal government had conceded that in recognition of Chicago's serious and perplexing problem it would not object should the court draw its mandate so that the Secretary of War could, should he see fit, permit the sanitary district to continue to withdraw the present or even an increased volume of water pending action by Congress.

RECOVERS FROM SHOT FIRED BY SOLDIER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 5. — Mrs. Charles M. Rockwell, who was seriously wounded yesterday by a bullet fired by a sentry on duty at the government reservation on Point Loma, was said by physicians to be progressing favorably, with the hope expressed that she will recover.

The sentry, who was placed under arrest by Fort Rosecrans authorities after the shooting, said today that he intended merely to frighten occupants of the automobile in which Mrs. Rockwell was riding after the driver apparently had misunderstood an order to halt for the customary inspection. The bullet glanced from the road and struck Mrs. Rockwell, a passenger in the rear of the car.

Formal charges against the sentry, Private George E. Sterett, will be deferred pending the outcome of Mrs. Rockwell's injury.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

MONROVIA, Jan. 5.—Alex Weiner, who says he found making bootleg liquor more profitable than peddling vegetables, was given a sentence of 300 days in the County Jail or $600 this morning by Police Judge Clyde Burr.

Weiner was arrested yesterday by the local police for having liquor in his possession and later when the house he has been occupying, on South Myrtle avenue below Huntington Drive, was raided 600 gallons of mash was discovered, a large still was in operation, some finished bootleg liquor was found and numerous containers and labeled bottles were stored in the place.

The raid and the arrest of Weiner was made by Chief of Police A. E. Bovee, Assistant Chief Frank Scott and Officers Morris, Seem and Perscke.

The bootlegging business had been conducted by Weiner, he said, at the Myrtle avenue house for the past two months. He came here five months ago from Los Angeles and had been a vegetable vender.

SONS OF ERIN CONNECT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Irishmen and champions both, Mickey Walker, Jersey's welterweight fighting fool, and Michael Francis McTigue, more or less direct from County Clare—meet at the First Regiment Armory of Newark in a twelve-round bout on Wednesday night of this week.

Walker is the popular welterweight champion and McTigue a decidedly unpopular light heavyweight champion of the world.

When Irishman meets Irishman a real fight should occur, according to tradition. But when these particular Irishmen get within arm's reach of each other Wednesday night a real fight may or may not result. Walker is a real scrapper, tearing in continually, keenly enjoying every moment of the man-to-man battle. But somewhere along the trail bold Mike McTigue dropped the fighting spirit that should have been his birthright. Since he lifted the light heavyweight crown from the curly thatch of Battling Siki, the singular Senegalese, Michael has been the very acme of caution.

McTigue cannot win Walker's welterweight crown Wednesday night. Walker cannot win McTigue's light heavyweight laurels unless Mickey knocks McTigue out, as the contest is a no-decision affair.

With nothing to gain and everything to lose, McTigue probably will not take any long chances against the lighter man. He will probably fight a purely defensive battle and "mount the bicycle" if the going gets too rough.

It is unlikely that Walker can knock out McTigue, though Mickey probably thinks he can. The bold Michael is not the greatest fighter in the world, but he knows how to defend himself in the ring.

GOES OUT OF HIS CLASS

NOTES FROM THE HOLLYWOOD A. C.

All "Tank Members" are requested to make reservations for the spectacular feed to take place one week from Saturday night. Several new members will be admitted to the "Tank Gang." "Big Splash" Thompson wants all the boys to be on hand.

• • •

Ken Albright, who graduated to the championship ranks against class, is improving every day. Accordingly to his present pace he will be one of the club's best in a short time.

• • •

Bob Hayward announced last night that the next boxing show will take place the 21st inst. This will be good news to the members, as every show that Bob has promoted was a great success for action and entertainment. No doubt the next will be even better.

• • •

Bert Herbrell, Frank Galloway and George L. Eastman were all seen in the squash courts yesterday getting in shape for the national tourney. Either Eastman or Herbrell have been in good shape for months; when they are, they are two of the club's best.

• • •

We all miss Lynn Comer of the "Tank Table" and hope the old boy will show up soon. For the good of the Tank Gang George Marshall should keep him working.

• • •

Tom Kennedy may also Battling Al Lemos and Tom Gallery in his next card. Gallery is a youngster who just blew in from Chicago, where he won several bouts. He was a big hit in Hamilton. Lemos needs no introduction; he swings a mean mitt.

• • •

Doc Shaw may be seen in a gym suit soon. He has challenged Eddie Kamper to a baseball match. What a match this should be.

Tex Rickard has ruled out radio in future boxing bouts in which he is promoter. He claims broadcasting the results seriously harms the financial returns.

GEORGE KELLY RISKS HIS JOB

Plays on Same Basketball Team With O'Connell

Jimmy Withdraws to Spare Friend Complications

Prexy Heydler Causes Rumpus in Bay City Winter Camp

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—Jimmy O'Connell, suspended outfielder of the New York Giants, was permitted to withdraw today from a professional basketball team, made up for hte most part of George Kelly, Giant first sacker, and other baseball professionals, after President John Heydler of the National League said that Kelly would be risking his baseball standing by such association with O'Connell. Others on the steam are Sammy Bohne, Cincinnati second baseman; Bert Cole, former Detroit pitcher; "Wee" Ludolph, Vernon pitcher; Ran Kelly of the Texas League, and "Imp" Begley, formre Cincinnati rookie.

It has been arranged to have O'Connell play running guard in games other than those in which Kelly participated. President Heydler indicated, however, that the presence of Kelly on the team would be the basis of an action to suspended him as a player in the National Baseball League as long as O'Connell remained on the basketball outfit.

THREATENS ACTION

O'Connell admitted last year having attempted to bribe a player on an opposing team and was indefinitely suspended from organized baseball.

Heydler added that he would favor similarly drastic action against Sammy Bohne, Cincinnati infielder, who also is reported to be a member of the team.

Bohne, it was recalled, is involved in a suit against a Chicago sports publication which charged he was approached by gamblers seeking to have him "throw" games against the New York Giants.

Kelly was one of the three players named by O'Connell in the latter's bribery confession to Commissioner Landis. With the other two, Frankie Frisch and Ross Young, Kelly was exonerated, however, by the commissioner's findings, which resulted in the banishment of O'Connell and Cozy Dolan.

AWAITS DETAILS

President Heydler indicated that so far as he was concerned no ac-

HE RUNS TONIGHT

BY FEG MURRAY

Will Nurmi's wonderful running form carry him to victory as easily on the indoor board tracks of America this winter as it has on the cinderpaths of Europe for the past ten years? This question will be answered tonight when he runs the first indoor race of his life at the Finnish-American games in New York City. No doubt the citizens will come out in large numbers to see Paavo and his famous wrist watch in action, some hoping to see this newest invader go the way of Carpentier, Epinard, and Firpo, and others looking forward to a matchless exhibition of running with perhaps a new world's record as the climax to the evening.

If this pale, frail-looking mechanical draughtsman succeeds in beating the best of America's indoor campaigners on their own board tracks in his first attempt at that style of running, he will truly be a "miracle athlete," and no doubt this invasion of his will do much toward changing the form of American distance runners in the future.

The two outstanding features of the "Running Robot's" method of propelling himself over the ground are the erect posture of his body in relation to his stride, and the fact that he lands on his heel instead of the ball of his foot. Most runners lean forward as they run, their legs pushing their bodies ahead. Nurmi's torso is held erect, at right angles to the ground, and in the center of his running. His legs pull him ahead as well as push.

Nurmi's "hip-pivot" reduces the weight of the body on the foot that is in contact with the ground—another secret of his success. He also believes that most runenrs use their shoulders and arms too much, and has eliminated this action as much as possible.

RITOLA LAYS FOR NURMI

Will Run in Only One Event Against Famous Finn in Indoor Track Meet Tonight

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Willie Ritola, formidable Finnish runner, who was developed in this country, will not engage in two races against Paavo Nurmi, fellow-Finn, at the indoor athletic meet of the Finnish-American Athletic Club, to be held in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, according to plans divulged today.

Ritola has decided to withdraw from the one-mile run and save himself for the 5000-meter special, a distance to which he is more adapted, despite his 4:13 mile in Finland in advance of the last Olympic games at Paris. Nurmi, however, will go to the post in both the mile run and the 5000-meter chase.

It was explained that Ritola realizes his greatest chance of winning over Nurmi is in the longer race and that he is preparing himself accordingly.

Local athletic followers interpreted Ritola's decision as an indication of the keen rivalry which exists between the two Finnish running stars. This rivalry had its inception in the Olympic games when, it is said, Nurmi, after beating Ritola a stride in the 5000-meter title race, declined Ritola's hand extended in congratulation after the finish of the race. In support of this interpretation it was explained that on one occasion recently Nurmi and Ritola happened to be in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory training at the same time, but no words of greeting passed between them.

RUMOR STANFORD COMING SOUTH TO TAKE ON PARIS

Both Games Likely to be Staged in Coliseum; Contests Add Much Color to 1925 Season

BY BRAVEN DYER

The mighty Golden Bears, undefeated over a period of five years, will appear in Los Angeles October 31 against the Pomona College gridders, according to an announcement made last night by Eugene Nixon, director of athletics at the Claremont institution, and confirmed later by R. W. "Curley" Cortelyou, assistant graduate manager at the University of California. Local football fans are thus assured one more fine pigskin dish in addition to others already brewing for the 1925 season.

Nixon did not announce the site of the battle, but did say that he had made application for the Coliseum two weeks ago. It is expected that a game of this class will be staged in the big bowl. Zack Farmer, secretary of the Community Development Association, under whose management the Coliseum is operated recently stated that no institution in the south had any dates cinched for next fall, the committee which makes the assignments having deferred action until later in the year.

TIGERS MEET CARDS

It is understood that Stanford will also play here in the fall, presumably against Occidental, as it will be as much of an attraction as the Pomona-California scrap.

The Sagehens went to Berkeley last fall and lost to the Golden Bears, 28 to 0. Twice the locals had the ball on California's 4-yard line, the absence of Boryer Bell, their best line plunger, handicapping the Pomona athletes in a position where a man of his power would have meant a lot. Les Baynham, 200-pound tackle, was also out of the scrap, and most of the players showed the effects of having held U.S.C. to a 14-to-0 count the week previous.

Andy Smith's crew will shape up with any on the Coast next fall. The tall mentor loses only one or two men, among them "Babe" Horrell, and with such men as Captain-elect Tut Imlay, Young, Dixon and Griffin in the backfield the Bears will be hard to stop.

FACES TASK

Coach Nixon faces a serious task at Pomona, losing two-thirds of his veteran backfield combination and four men from the line. Those who won't be back are Capt. Clark, Fuzzy Merritt and Bell from the ball-carrying group, and Ranney Draper, Dick Worden, Les Baynham and Coats Vernon from the line. This leaves Captain-elect Ed McCully, fullback; Ralph Robles, center, and Joe Lang and Bob Burger, guards, as the nucleus around which Nixon must mould a new eleven.

There is a ray of hope in that three or four promising Frosh players will be available. Perhaps the best of the bunch is Harold Merritt, younger brother of Fuzzy, and a man whose is likely to fill the star signal warbler's boots. Ed Reinke, 10-flat sprinter from Downey, played halfback for the peagreeners this season and Nixon will undoubtedly use him to run the Ganks. If Joe Peterson, who was one of the best ball carriers on the squad two years ago, should elect to return to his studies this semester a lot of wrinkles would immediately be erased from the Sagehen mentor's brow.

Nixon won't have to worry about linemen to replace the two tackles and ends he loses for during the past season Fritz Hesmahalch and Leavitt performed creditably. Art Maisch and Bonar Dyer, two 185-pounders from the frosh eleven, will also be fit for varsity service. Jack Cowan is practically sure of one end berth, while Natland and Anderson of the frosh are good men and one of 'em ought to find a place with the regulars.

TIGERS STRONG

At Occidental Coach Sid Nichols will have one of the strongest outfits in the history of the Eagle Rock institution. Although the Bengals were nosed out by Pomona for the championship they put a great team in the field and showed well all season. In the Stanford game "Pop" Warner's athletes had to work hard to get a 20-to-6 victory. Nichols will have a flock of backfield men in Wheeler, Mishkin, Purser, Buckman, Gregory, McHann and Smith, while most of his big linemen—Capt.-elect Renius, Stevens, Hitch, Conde, Teachout and Godett—will be back.

Both the Pomona-California and Stanford-Occidental games will add a lot of color to the 1925 season. The Bears did not appear here during the year just closed, while a lot of folks were unable to get tickets to the New Year's battle, which featured the Cardinals against Notre Dame. U.S.C. is playing Idaho at Moscow on the date of the Sagehen-Bear scrap, while it is believed that Occidental will pick a date which will not conflict with any other big local game.

"FLEET SPORTS"

The U.S.S. California's basket tossers look better than ever as the champions of the battleship divisions, following their 39-to-15 win over the U.S.S. Tennessee quintet Sunday afternoon at the Troma Field gymnasium. The game started off the last half of the fleet's sixty-six-game schedule, there being no casaba-chasing during the three-weeks' period of Christmas leave.

There will be thirty games between battleship teams this month, all but two being played at Los Angeles Harbor. The only exceptions are the U.S.S. Colorado-U.S.S. Maryland game, at San Francisco, on the 26th inst., and the U.S.S. Pennsylvania-U.S.S. Nevada game, at Bremerton, Wash., on the 30th inst.

Indications point to another final tilt between the five from the U.S.S. California, as champions of the Battle Fleet, and the Thirty-fifth Destroyer Squadron five, as champions of the San Diego area, for the Battle Fleet title. The same squads met in the finals last season, when the destroyer men took the honors. Ensign Barnes's boys from the fleet flagship look good to mete out some revenge this year.

Two of the three smokers for the boxing and wrestling championship of the battleship divisions will be held this month, it was announced yesterday by Lieutenant-Commander Donald W. Hamilton, force athletic officer. The winning teams from Battleship Division Five and Division Four will meet on the 10th inst., while the top squads from Divisions Three and Four will tangle on the 21st inst. The finals, between Divisions Five and Four, will not be held until mid-March, after the ships return from the problem with the Scouting Fleet in southern waters.

The longest game ever played in the major leagues without either side scoring was an eighteen-inning game between Washington and Detroit, July 16, 1909.

CROWLEY BETTER; WILL LEAVE SOON FOR HOME

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—James Crowley, star backfield man of the University of Notre Dame football team who is in a hospital here suffering from a slight stomach disorder, is "progressing favorably" and will be able to leave for home at the end of the week, his physicians reported today. The Notre Dame team departed for South Bend, Ind., today.

Crowley ate something that did not agree with him soon after the game with Stanford at Pasadena on New Year's Day. He was taken ill on the train coming to San Francisco. His nerves were affected for a time, but soon mended.

Those intimate with Tilden represent him as not desirous at this time of reviving discussion of the merits of the new rule proposal or on any way opening a fresh controversy on the subject which caused his temporary withdrawal last summer from Davis cup ranks. He is satisfied, they say, that the new proposal will work for the best interests of the game and anxious to let his personal position to take care of itself in the future.

Tilden, it is understood, views as a possibility his retirement in the near future from the game, which he has dominated for the past five years, but his friends are convinced such action would not altogether be based on the feature of the amateur rule proposal, which most affected his player-writer status. The champion already has engaged in motion-picture work and is interested in several other projects, all of which have made increasing demands on his time.

KANE TO REJECT OFFER

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — When Thomas Rice, representing the National Sporting Club of London, arrives in New Work with an offer for Tommy Gibbons to box Luis Firpo in England, early in March, he will not find Eddie Kane, manager of the St. Paul heavyweight, in any too receptive mood for the match.

Kane said tonight the purse offered by the National Sporting Club is about 50 per cent of what the contest would be worth if decided in this country.

Gibbons will meet Jack Burke, rugged Pittsburg light heavyweight, and a former sparring mate of Jack Dempsey's, in a ten-round bout at Grand Rapids on Thursday night. Rice is due to arrive in New York tomorrow, Kane said.

Charlie Paddock and Loren Murchison Become Sport Missionaries in Few Wee

Famous Sprinters to Lecture on Athletics

To be Accompanied by Father and Mother of Champ

Charlie Paddock and Loren Murchison, whose combined speed could probably make Tommy Milton's go-fast look like a flivver in reverse, will leave within a few weeks on a missionary trip to the ends of the earth. Paddock and Murchison will make a complete circuit of the world, running exhibition races against the home-town talent, giving speeches, and otherwise spreading the gospel of athletics through a dozen or so countries. They will not return until October.

The two sprinters will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Paddock, the parents of the champ.

The party will start east from here late in February, opening a campaign of competition and lecturing in Sweden and Finland, working down to the Mediterranean countries, including Egypt, and reaching Manila in time for the Oriental Olympics, which will be one of the biggest events on their program. They will probably not return until after the regular track season in America.

Paddock is once more working out, and declares himself to be rounding rapidly into good condition. He is taking more gentle training this year, having had a lot of grief in his preliminary work last season.

It is hoped that the voyage will work up interest in track and field athletics which will result in a large entry in the Olympic games to come.

ROMAN LIGHTWEIGHTS DEFEAT HOLLY TEAM

L. A. High's lightweight basketball team defeated Hollywood High by a 22-to-9 score at Hollywood yesterday and thereby made up for one of the three defeats that the Roman varsity has sustained at the hands of the Foothiller unlimited team in practice. Hollywood gets into action Friday at Manual Arts and the lightweights look to be due for a bad beating at the hands of the Toiler 130's.

Outclassing their opponents from start to finish, L. A.'s midgets were never in danger yesterday. However, this is the first time Coach Bailey's team has played an outside team and they may show to better advantage later in the season. Kuplan, Livermore, Jillson and Capt. Jimmy Morford, the Wilshire first team, were jerked before the game was very old or it would have been a slaughter.

A regular league with letters and trophies may be formed.

FROM MINE BOY TO MANAGER

Harris Combines Work and Play

Bucky Harris at 16

[This is the second installment of the autobiography of Stanley Harris, youngest major league baseball manager in the history of the game and the victorious strategist and one of the outstanding players in the 1924 World Series, in which his Washington club won the pennant for the first time. The rise of Harris from colliery boy to big league manager in eight years is one of the most remarkable life stories America has ever produced.]

CHAPTER II

OTHER SIDE OF THE PICTURE

By Stanley Bucky Harris

Little did I think fourteen years before the wind-up of the 1924 series that I would some day manage a world's championship baseball club. Like many boys, I had an ambition to be a baseball player. My brother, Merle, who is seven years my senior, was a professional in the minor leagues and I hoped to follow his example.

If I knew there was a long, hard path to travel before reaching my goal, I never gave it a thought. Meanwhile, I had to go to work to help the family finances. So, when I finished the sixth grade in school, I told my mother it was time for me to help her and Merle make ends meet.

She wanted me to continue school a few more years. The only work I could do, she pointed out, would be in the coal mines. She saw little of a real future there. Knowing my ambition to be a professional ballplayer some day, she said:

"Sonny, you'll have to work so hard that you won't have a chance to play ball. You're frail now. It worries me."

LIKED HARD WORK

"I'm all right, mother," I told her. "I can stand as much as most of the bigger kids around here now. Hard work doesn't seem to hurt them. It won't hurt me."

I was only 12 at the time, a skinny, active kid and old beyond my years. Life in a mine town gives a youngster a mature viewpoint on many things. He knows that he has to go to work to help keep a home together and he doesn't waste any time wishing for an easy life. He realizes that if he is to eat he has to work—or did when I was a boy.

We had been living in Pittston since I was 5 years of age, having moved to Pennsylvania from Port Jervis, N. Y., where I was born on November 8, 1896. By a coincidence the house in which I first saw the light of day was on Ball street. That was a good start for a baseball player anyhow.

Living as long as we had in Pittston, I knew just how to go about getting a job in the mines. W. J. Jennings, superintendent of No. 9 mine of the Pennsylvania Coal Company at the time, and now a high official with that organization, was a neighber. With my mother still protesting and insisting that we could manage, I called on Mr. Jennings.

"So you want a job, eh?" he asked. "Tired of school?"

TWELVE CENTS AN HOUR

"Yes, sir. And anyhow, I'm big enough to help earn my own living now."

I spoke the truth, too. I was tired of school, just as most boys are in their teens. Later I realized that I had much to learn from books and went to night school. As things have turned out I didn't make a mistake. I certainly would have done so had I stopped my schooling when I finished the sixth grade.

Mr. Jennings gave me a job. At the same time he pointed out that I shouldn't neglect study just because I was a wage-earner. I will always be thankful for his advice. He put me in the washery along with some other youngsters. Our job was to help tend the pickers which separate the slate and coal.

The task required active fingers rather than any brains or skill. It meant working nine hours a day with a half hour allowed for lunch. For this I received 12 cents an hour, or $6.48 a week. My first pay envelope carried a big thrill with it. I took it, unopened, to my mother. Aside from the hours the labor was not hard. I must say I thrived on it. I've found that work, either in the mines or on the baseball diamond, doesn't harm anyone. That holds true for whatever a man does.

I had been playing baseball from the time I was 6 or 7 years of age. Holding down a job didn't make me forget the sport. Only, instead of playing after school, I did so when work at the mine was finished. In the long days of spring and early summer I would practice until dark, after having put in nine hours work. It didn't make any difference whether I had a cold supper or not.

My mother would frequently protest. "Sonny, you'll be nothing but a rack of bones if you keep this up," she would say as she prepared me a bite to eat.

"No. I'm going to be a ball player some day. Then you won't have anything to worry about." I would tell her. "I'm learning my business every day by staying out late to play. And it's a lot of fun, too."

CHANCE FOR MORE BALL

The scrub games furnished the main recreation for the youngsters in the mines. Obtaining a regulation baseball with which to play was an event. Most often we used a ball made by wrapping a small, hard rubber core with string and then covering it with tape. A new glove or bat was a thing to plan and save for weeks in advance. What we lacked in equipment we certainly made up in enjoyment. No completely outfitted bunche of boys could have had more fun. We had to work hard and as a result appreciated better what time we did have for play.

After six months at the mine pickers, Mr. Jennings sent for me and told me there was a job vacant as office boy of the Butler Colliery. My mother and brother advised me to take it. They argued that the chances for promotion were better. And Merle shrewdly observed: "Maybe you'll get a chance to play more ball."

PREP HARRIERS TRAIN

Southern California High Schools to Enter Great Cross-Country Run at Occidental College

With the entry list open to any high school in Southern California, several hundred prep cross-country runners will enter the two and one-tenth-mile invitational race to be staged over the hills of Eagle Rock from Occidental College, the 24th inst., according to Fred Johnson of Hollywood High and Eugene Mahoney of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The meet is under the auspices of Occidental College, but Mahoney and Johnson are managing.

Each school will be allowed to enter but ten men in a team. In event that more than ten men from one school desire to enter, they will be designated as Team No. 2. It is thought that the number of prep harriers who are at the starting line the 24th inst., will be close to 300.

The meet will be divided into two classes to take care of the crowd. Class A will constitute schools of an enrollment of more than 1200. This run will start first. Institutions under 1200 are Class B. An individual trophy will be presented the low-score teams in each class. Three victories will make the trophy permanent. Individual winners will receive medals.

L. A. High, for several years, has made it a custom to hold a cross-country run preceding each track season, for city high school distance men. The Wilshire institution abandoned the custom this year because the majority of the L. A. runners were not in favor of it. The Occidental meet will be a much bigger event and may become an annual affair.

CYRIL WALKER'S OWN STORY, "INVALID TO GOLF CHAMPION"

[This is the last of a series of articles in which Cyril Walker tells how he fought his way to golf supremacy against handicaps which would have beaten most of us.]

CHAPTER VI

THE GREATEST DAY OF MY LIFE

By Cyril Walker

1924 American Open Golf Champion

June 6, 1924, was to be the greatest day of my life. And I never started the second day's play in a national open tournament with more mental calm than this one. It was as if something in me foresaw.

A change in the pairings made Leo Diegel my playing partner for the day. I want to take this occasion to publicly express my appreciation of Leo's conduct toward me. He's a great boy. I was leading him by eight shots and when he saw the sort of game I was playing he became very enthusiastic, paid more attention to my shots than he did to his own and advised with me in all possible ways while giving me encouragement at every turn.

"I'm going to bring you in, Cyril," he told me.

There was a perfect gale blowing. In view of this my game going out was very much the best I had played since arriving at Oakland Hills. I came to the ninth hole needing only a three to be out in 35.

PLAYING DEAD

The ninth hole measures 340 yards. Because we were playing dead against the wind I used a full drive, hitting what I consider the finest shot I made in the tournament up to this time. My ball ended up five feet from the cup and I holed a birdie two. I was out in 34, two under par and three under the best score of my competitors. Bill Mehlhorn had done a 37.

But if this was encouraging, succeeding events were not.

At the tenth tee we were held up by the galleries following the other matches. At this stage I had only a scattered following. But breaking through the other fellow's crowds was slightly difficult. Diegel was worried lest I be upset by the delay.

"Keep cool," he said. "Don't let anything bother you."

"I'm all right," I replied, and in truth I had no premonition of disaster. Nevertheless, I took three putts on both the tenth and eleventh holes and, after doing the twelfth in par 5, came to grief again on the thirteenth. Only by solving one of the most difficult problems of the tournament did I escape even worse trouble.

LEFT IN TRAP

My tee shot on this 140-yard hole left me in a trap. I was right beneath a steep bank, facing a terrible shot, for the pin was close to the trap. The green was undulating, so that if you over-ran the pin the speed of the ball would be increased.

I used a niblick, laying the blade far back, hitting an inch behind the ball and putting everything I had into the stroke. The ball traveled straight up, came down three feet from the cup and held there. Then, following this escape, I missed my putt and had to take a four!

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Diegel. "You've got to stop this!"

I took hold of myself on the 460-yard fourteenth, where, by virtue of a 300-yard drive and a straight-faced mashie I was on in two with a chance to get down in four, 1 under par. I missed a three-foot putt, however, and took a five. Still par was not so bad!

My putting had made me a bit desperate, now, and once more I tried to cut the corner on the fifteenth. Again I failed to carry past the traps in the dogleg and again I took a five. And then, to top the thing off, I ran up another five on the sixteenth by missing a four-foot putt.

I needed a par 3 on the seventeenth and a birdie four on the eighteenth to come in with a 40, which would give me my third successive 74. This was exactly what I did. The four on the 478-yard eighteenth was gained by virtue of a drive and spoon that put me on the green in two.

I went over to the scoreboard. Bobby Jones had taken a 75 and I found he and I were now tied for the lead at 222. Mehlhorn was a stroke back of us. Hagen was four strokes and Bobby Cruickshank three strokes to the rear. I went into the clubhouse with the appetite for lunch which I had accumulated during the morning round completely vanished. At last I had a real chance to win the championship.

HIDES FOR FEED

I couldn't eat more than a bite. The place was full of people who kept coming up, tapping me on the shoulder and telling me how fine it was that I was tied for the lead. I appreciated their interest, but I felt that I must get out of there. I ducked for the locker room.

Down there I ran into numbers of players, excitedly discussing the prospects of a professional beating out Bobby Jones. Naturally, the men who make their living by golfing did not want to see an amateur capturing the open title twice in succession.

"You've got to beat Jones," everybody was telling me, while trying to give me advice as to how this was to be done.

What I wanted was not advice, but quiet. I finally found it in a remote corner of the locker room. Hidden there stretched out flat on my back on a bench. Just before it was the hour to start out again I bathed my face and head in cool water.

For the first time since competing in a national open I was not tired and anxious at the beginning of the final round. I realized that with Jones, Mehlhorn and myself so closely bunched there was going to be a tight struggle. But the improvement in my physical condition since my operation and the general steadiness of my game up to this point had given me all sorts of confidence. I felt that I would be able to hold my own in the greatest opportunity of my life.

FINDS NERVE

On the very first hole I found my nerves were all right. After a drive of more than 300 yards I overplayed my second and had to chip back, lying four feet from the cup. It was one of the sort of putts I had been missing in the morning, but this time I didn't fail.

"Well," said Leo, "you had to scrape that one, but you got it. Anyway it's the card and the pencil that count."

The second was played in par and the third brought additional evidence that I would not necessarily break under stress. This is a 210-yard hole. I sliced a spoon shot to rough, looked up on my second and failed to get out and dropped my third nine feet short of the hole. But I sank my putt and I felt that if I could do that after my other mistakes my nerves were all to the good. I went out in 38, which, considering the high wind, was good enough. Word came back that Jones had taken a 38 and Mehlhorn a 39. So I was no worse off than at the start.

MY BEST PLAY

Jones had started off the final nine holes with 6-5-5, I was told, too, while Mehlhorn, playing just back of him, had taken 4-3. I did the tenth and eleventh in 4-5, so, at that point, Mehlhorn had overhauled me while Bobby had fallen back slightly. It surely was a tough battle. At this point I met Fred Kennedy of New York, one of the best authorities on the game living.

"How are you going?" he asked.

"Fine, I feel. Is there anybody ahead of me?"

"Don't you be thinking if there's anybody ahead of you," he said; "mind your own game."

"Now look here, Fred," I said, "I want to know exactly what's happening. I'm not afraid."

"Well," he ventured, "I think the man that can break 300 will win."

I felt sure I could do this. Par 5 on the twelfth and 3 on the thirteenth, followed by a birdie 4 on the fourteenth, had brought my total to 281. I could take eighteen strokes on the last four holes and still get home in 299.

The troubles I had had on the dog-leg fifteenth moved me to play safely this trip. But the hole was my jinx. I missed a four-foot putt and had to take my fourth consecutive five there.

Par for the three remaining holes was 4-3-5. I could break 300 by getting 4-4-5, one over par.

CLINCHES TITLE

On the sixteenth or lake hole I made the shot that clinched the title, the best play under the conditions I ever have executed. Previously I had been hooking my drive to the left, to get a better play over the lake and thus had found the rough. This time I purposely aimed to the right of center, ultimately ending up right in the middle of the fairway.

Now it was necessary to play over the lake, which ran up close to the green, and at the same time hold the latter. If I over-ran the green there was a good chance that I might get into the water coming back. On the other hand too short a shot wouldn't get over the hazard. A carry of 175 yards was absolutely necessary.

This play has been described so often that I will not repeat all the details. Sufficient for me to say that using my midiron I stopped my ball five feet from the cup and my putt went down for a birdie three.

WELCOME RECOGNITION

Fred Kennedy came up at this juncture and told me Jones had finished with 300 and Mehlhorn with 301. The way lay open to the championship. I finished with a 3 and a 5, for a total of 297, before a gallery which included every person on the course.

Out of the applause and glory which the moment brought, one circumstance stands out more than any other.

"Well, well, well, Cyril," he exclaimed as he shook my hand in congratulation. "We've all got to respect you now."

It was welcome recognition after years of struggle against odds that had kept me out of the first ranks of the stars of the game.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER

BILL HENRY

All the boys who argued and squawked when Fidel LaBarba and Jimmy McLarnin were having their four-round arguments a few weeks ago, will have a chance to swallow their words or else say "I told you so" a week from tonight when these two tiny whirlwinds get together over the ten-round route out at Jack Doyle's. All the LaBarba rooters were strong in their opinion that Fidel could beat his opponent easily over the longer distance when he was outpointed in their first meeting. Now they'll have a chance to find out.

Offhand anybody would pick LaBarba to win simply because he finished his two bouts with McLarnin like a thoroughbred and made it appear that he could have knocked McLarnin out had the bout continued for another round or so. However, we have the sad experience of those who bet on Pat Lester because he seemed to be going so strong at the end of his first bout with Ralph Smith. When they fought six rounds, Smith got better as the fight went on, thereby confounding all the wise guys.

If cleverness is the outstanding quality necessary to success over the long route McLarnin has it. But LaBarba is a terrific hitter and with ten rounds in which to bide his time and await a good opportunity to deliver one of those wicked kicks in the kitchen, he ought to be able to do it in good fashion. Doyle's first ten-round affair will sell out the house with the 2000 extra seats and all.

Charley Paddock is a most interesting young man not only to watch but to converse with. Yesterday we happened to run across him and asked him about Houben, the German sprint star. Houben, it will be remembered, didn't compete in the Olympics because he wasn't asked, so the Germans invited all the sprinters who competed in the Paris games to visit Berlin and Houben beat them one by one, including Abrams, Paddock, Murchison, Carr and all the rest.

According to Paddock the German sprinter is a fine runner, but doesn't go so well over the 200-meter distance as over the century. Charley says that he and Murchison got fooled in the heats when they each won theirs handily, while Houben seemed to be strained to the limit. They thought the finals would be easy, but the German not only got off to a terrific start but kept on pulling away.

St. Mary's alumni are making an awful squawk about being left off the Trojan football schedule for next year. This at least indicates that that are some people who don't feel that it was entirely good luck and biased officiating which won that game for the Oakland eleven. Coach Slip Madigan is extremely anxious for another crack at U.S.C. and says he doesn't bar them any more than he bars anybody else.

Incidentally this brings to mind the thought that there may be a whole lot of changes on the Trojan schedule before next September rolls around. Of course, a rumor is only a rumor and all that but it wouldn't be surprising if the Trojans had a bigger and better schedule next year than they had this year and that would be considerable.

U.S.C. isn't likely to be very well satisfied playing Montana, Utah and a lot of other schools which were simply murdered by the other Coast Conference teams this season. Even Idaho, which is to be played in Portland, will lose most of its team by graduation and probably will be easy for Gus Henderson's men. It looks as though the Oregon Aggies and Iowa were the only tough spots on the Trojan schedule at this time. It will be surprising to a lot of people if the Trojan schedule remains the same as originally announced after the conference meeting in Portland.

BAY TELEPHONE BONDS OFFERED

Issue to be for $925,000 and Yield 6 Per Cent

Federal Land Bank Liens Are on Market

Five Local Bankers Will Attend Convention

The Citizens' National Company and M. H. Lewis & Co., are offering a new issue of $925,000 Santa Monica Bay Telephone Company first and refunding mortgage 6 per cent bonds due 1944 at 100 and yielding 6 per cent interest. The company operates in Santa Monica, Ocean Park, Venice, Brentwood, Sawtelle, Westwood, Ocean Park Heights and Playa del Rey, and adjacent territories, serving a population estimated at 100,000 within an area of seventy-five square miles.

The bonds are secured by a first lien, subject to $143,000 underlying bonds, on all property of the company appraised at $1,734,000. Earnings of the organization for 1924 were 2.76 times the total interest requirements, including interest on this issue of bonds.

Following are those identified with the phone company's operation:

John G. Mott, president; Willis G. Hunt, vice-president; Dean Mason, treasurer; Richard H. Lacy, vice-president; J. A. Jevne, vice-president and general manager; Fred H. Leistikow and Charles G. Andrews, stockholders.

Issuance of these bonds was authorized by the Railroad Commission of California and application has been made to certify them as legal investment of California savings banks.

Group Offers Issue

Public offering was made yesterday of a new issue of $30,000,000 ten-thirty-year Federal Land Bank 4 1-2 per cent bonds at a price of 101 1-2 and interest to yield more than 4.30 per cent to the redeemable date 1935, and 4 1-2 per cent thereafter to redemption or maturity.

Bonds are being offered to the public by a country-wide group, composed of the twelve Federal land banks, investment houses, institutions and upwards of 1000 dealers. The banking group is headed by Alex. Brown & Sons of Baltimore; Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Brown Brothers & Co., Lee, Higginson & Co., The National City Company and the Guaranty Company of New York.

The bonds are exempt from Federal, State, municipal and local taxation, are dated January 1, 1925, and are due January 1, 1955. They are not redeemable before January 1, 1935, but are redeemable at par and interest at any time after ten years from date of issue. They are in coupon and registered form, interchangeable, in denominations of $10,000, $5000, $1000, $500, $100 and $50. Interest is payable January 1 and July 1, at any Federal land bank or Federal reserve bank.

The Supreme Court of the United States has held that these banks were legally created as part of the banking system of the United States and that the bonds issued by the banks are instrumentalities of the United States government and are exempt from Federal, State, municipal and local taxation. They are acceptable by the United States Treasury as security for government deposits, including postal savings funds, and the Federal Farm Loan Act provides that the bonds are lawful investments for all fiduciary and trust funds under the jurisdiction of the United States government.

Meeting in Georgia

Five Los Angeles members of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association are expected to attend the spring meeting announced for April 20-23, at the Bon Air-Vanderbilt Hotel, Augusta, Ga. About 300 members of the council will attend from all parts of the United States.

The members of the council in Los Angeles are L. H. Rosebery, vice-president and trust officer, Security Trust and Savings Bank, public relations commission; W. D. Longyear, vice-president Security Bank, chairman legislative committee; W. R. Morehouse, vice-president Security Bank, executive committee, savings banks division; Leo S. Chandler, vice-president California Bank, and president California Bankers' Association, and Henry S. McKee, president Barker Brothers, former president California Bankers' Association.

Business Grows

To handle the amount of new business to and from Los Angeles which passes over the lines of the Illinois Central Railroad, the office here has added the services of Charles A. Hawley as city freight and passenger agent. The Illinois Central already has two traveling agents out of Los Angeles, it was stated yesterday by T. F. Bowes, commercial agent, but the city business has reached such proportions that the executive offices authorized the creation of the new position.

Mr. Hawley was formerly with the Southern Pacific as passenger agent in San Francisco and in other capacities, and later was a traveling freight and passenger agent operating from headquarters in New York City.

Brokerage Firm Formed

BAD CHECKS

The following bulletin on spurious checks was issued yesterday by the forgery detail of the Los Angeles Police Department detective bureau:

Los Angeles merchants are warned regarding the activities of a woman known as Mrs. R. L. Walters, who is wanted by the police forgery detail for issuing bad checks. It is her custom to enter a grocery store or meat market, make several purchases, and in payment present a fake salary check made payable to R. L. Walters, supposedly her husband. She usually says that she and her husband have a joint bank account, that Mr. Walters neglected to have the check cashed the evening before, and therefore she indorses the check herself, signing the name, Mrs. B. Walters. In most cases she is successful in obtaining $10 or $15 from the storekeeper.

Following is a description of this woman: American, about 5 feet, 4 inches tall; 35 years of age, weighs 130 pounds, is a blonde and of slender build.

CORPORATIONS BUY FREELY

Basic Industries Indicate Confidence in 1925 by Planning Huge Expenditures; Guide for Business

BY EARLE E. CROWE

After the multitude of business forecasts published on the first of the year have been digested, the entire proposition seems to boil down to this question, "Have the retail buyers and the corporations enough confidence in the coming months to buy goods freely?"

Of course, a good deal of thoughtful study is devoted to the prognostications of the trend of interest rates, commodity prices and other indices, but if the production manager of the factory and the purchasing agent of the retail store are given their choice they would rather know the volume of goods they are going to sell. From disastrous experience they are fully aware that consumers are a fickle body. All signs may point to a season of expanding business, calling for higher rates of production and increased purchases of goods, but frequently, as business history testifies, the consuming public suddenly becomes wary and shuns the marts of commerce and the wheels of industry.

BAD GUESSES COSTLY

This condition of aloofness has developed before and left the warehouses and storerooms stocked full of unsold goods. Somebody guessed wrong or failed to sense the trend of the public mind. Either a reaction had set in from a period of wild speculative buying or, individually, the buyers decided that prices were too high. Political disturbances sometimes operated against free entry into the market, or the dissatisfaction of general unrest restrained normal buying tendencies. It was not necessarily the fault of the executive who ordered forward purchases, for all the barometers may have pointed that way. More likely the error was in planning too far ahead, or before the actual demonstration of buyer power was on record.

For these reasons considerable importance is now attached to the forward orders of the basic industries. The steel companies have a direct contact with the construction requirements of the country and provide a valuable index in the fluctuations of unfilled orders. The railroads are in close touch with the trend of the public mind and reflect the needs of the country to some extent in their estimates of new-equipment expenditures. The electrical industry, through its expansion program, forecasts the long-term outlook in particular sections.

The rate of operations in these industries and their appropriations for new equipment and expansion are accordingly regarded as a reliable index of the state of confidence in business. For 1925 these barometers tell a story of health and confidence that at least is significant of the absence of wariness and perhaps indicates the presence of real optimism.

RAILWAYS SHOW FAITH

Capital expenditures in 1925 by the railroads for improvements and new equipment are estimated by the Railway Age at an amount 15 per cent greater than in either 1923 or 1924. On estimates from thirty-two railway systems, having one-half of the mileage of the country, the total capital expenditures are placed at more than $1,200,000,000. The railroad executives support these budgets with optimistic statements of the business anticipated in their territories.

President Carl H. Gray of the Union Pacific is quoted by the Railway Age as saying:

"My belief is that the gross business of 1925 will closely approximate that of 1923 and will be to that extent larger than for the year just closing."

In California the transcontinental carriers are planning several important projects for which money has been appropriated. One of which no official announcement has been made but which is generally expected is the Santa Fe's extension from Bakersfield over the Tehachapi Mountains to Los Angeles. The Southern Pacific has authorized the expenditure of $52,000,000 in 1925 for its Pacific system.

Other large expenditures for 1925 have been authorized by the Pennsylvania, $60,000,000; Illinois Central, $42,200,000; Missouri Pacific, $26,200,000, and Southern Pacific, (Texas and Louisiana,) $10,600,000.

UTILITY PROGRAM LARGE

Extensive improvements in the public utility industry are reported by the Electrical World. The North American Company has announced a program calling for the expenditure of $41,500,000 in 1925, and Henry L. Doherty & Co. will spend $2,000,000 for the construction of 100 miles of a new steel tower transmission line in the East. Telephone plant and line extensions in New Jersey are estimated at $3,500,000. The huge program of the Southern California Edison Company in the high Sierras speaks for conditions in Central and in Southern California.

Steel companies are operating close to capacity, and unfilled orders are showing steady increases. The steel interests expect the demand from the building industries to form an appreciable part of their business, on the basis of orders on the books. The trend of the demand from the building industry especially is watched, for it is generally agreed that no period of prosperity can be maintained without the assistance of new construction.

No one but a disciple of the occult can accurately forecast the whims of the public mind. The industries closest to the largest section of the consuming body are in a fairly advantageous position. Their judgment is squarely placed on record in their 1925 capital expenditures.

Antitrust Law Action Involves Lowly Peanut

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A Sherman antitrust suit against the National Peanut Cleaners' and Shellers' Association was filed by the Federal government today at Norfolk, Va.

The petition asks dissolution of the association as a combination in violation of the law, and such further steps as may be necessary to prevent interference with interstate commerce in peanuts.

COTTON IN SYMPATHY WITH STOCKS SLUMPS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Cotton futures closed 44 to 81 points net lower today, the unsettled tone of the stock market causing a drop in prices in the late dealings. Losses of $2 to $2.80 a bale were registered on an early decline before moderate support from local bull interests, the trade and shorts caused a recovery. Trading quieted then until near the close, when the list broke $3 to $4 a bale, then came back slightly from its lows before the end.

Spot cotton closed 45 points net lower at $2.95.

During these 38 years of successful operation have come times of prosperity and times of depression. Los Angeles has grown from a sleepy little pueblo to a metropolis of over 1,000,000 people. Southern California has become famous as the "White Spot of America."

In this long period thousands of individual investors both large and small—have entrusted their funds to this Association without a penny's loss to any of them. Every withdrawal has been paid in cash at par—strictly in accordance with the contract—a record equalled by few financial institutions.

Backed by this long record of safety, our Term Certificates today offer you a thoroughly tested investment, yielding 6% per annum, PAYABLE QUARTERLY, without care or worry, and free from State and local taxes.

BOND QUOTATIONS

Prices Firm

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Bond prices maintained a firm tone today, although individual movements were highly irregular. Railroad issues gave a good demonstration of group strength, as buying of both high-grade investment and the semispeculative liens was resumed.

Announcement that the Magma Copper Company would increase its capitalization by an offering of additional stock to present shareholders caused a sharp break of 9 1-4 points in the company's 7 per cent bonds. Profit taking was reflected in the reactionary movements of other copper bonds, with Chile 6s receding 1 1-4 points.

Strength of a number of convertible bonds was influenced by stock advances.

New Haven, Missouri Pacific and St. Paul bonds were among those which scored substantial advances today, but Seaboard, Chicago Great Western and Norfolk and Western lines fell back.

In sympathy with the rise in sterling to a new post-war peak, United Kingdom 5½s of 1929 rallied to 117 eclipsing last year's high record. Other foreign obligations were firm.

The $3,000,000 Federal Loan Bank bond issue and several smaller offerings today were readily absorbed.

Following are yesterday's high, low and closing prices of bonds on the New York Stock Exchange, and the total sales of each bond. This market is now furnished from wires and is complete transaction the closing is quoted when it is the same as the day, and both low and close are omitted when they are the same as the high.

500,000 People Have Read This Book

YEARS ago we wrote a primer on sound investments, the most instructive, and deservedly the most popular piece of literature this House has ever issued. Half a million people have read it. For many it has meant the turning point towards success.

Thousands upon thousands have found in it this truth: that he who trusts his accumulations to hazard, lays by only chance of loss and resulting worry; while he who selects and cultivates one safe, sound form of investment, not only secures for himself and family a competence but adds that comfortable feeling of safety and satisfaction which can only come when wisdom and judgment dictate the investment. It tells you—

—How to select safe securities;

—How to secure the best interest rate consistent with safety;

—How—and how carefully—Straus Bond issues are underwritten and guarded throughout the life of the loan.

One man told us that to pay $10 for the information this book contains would be to buy it cheaply, but it needs only your simple request to assure your having a copy. If you are interested, not merely in earning, but in safely investing what you have earned; if you look forward to the time when income on your investments will save work itself, then write today for your copy of this book. DISTRICT: The Vista District is situated in the fertile, sloping foothill region about ten miles from the ocean, near Oceanside, and between the cities of Los Angeles and San Diego. The major portion of the land within the District has been cultivated for half a century by dry farming or through privately owned and operated pumping plants. Modern paved highways and the Santa Fe Railroad afford favorable transportation facilities. A climate free from extremes in temperature, and fertile soil are recognized as substantial assets. There are very few other sections of Southern California to which water can ever be as economically delivered, and where climate, soil, products and ideal living conditions warrant more intensive development and greater land values.

SECURITY AND PURPOSE OF ISSUE: These bonds are the direct obligation of the Vista Irrigation District, and are payable, principal and interest, from an unlimited ad valorem tax levied against all real property within the District, under the same authority as school taxes, and ranking ahead of all mortgages, present or future, including mortgages securing Federal Land Bank Bonds.

The bond proceeds will provide funds for the installation of a complete modern underground pressure-pipe water distribution system, with all main canals either cement-lined or of siphon character, the water to be distributed both for domestic purposes and for the irrigation of orchards and vegetable garden farms. The installation of this system is under the supervision of Mr. J. B. Lippincott, consulting engineer of Los Angeles.

WATER SUPPLY: The Vista District secures its water supply from the Henshaw Reservoir, the second largest reservoir in California, which is now owned and operated by the San Diego County Water Company. This reservoir, which impounds 164,000 acre feet, represents an investment of millions of dollars, and constitutes the irrigation and domestic water supply for this section of Southern California. The Vista District has a perpetual contract to receive water at a stipulated price, which compares favorably with water costs in other highly developed sections of Southern California and can never be increased.

The reliability of this water supply and storage facilities has been confirmed by the United States Reclamation Service, the State Engineer of California, Mr. M. M. O'Shaughnessy, City Engineer of San Francisco, and Mr. H. Hawgood, Consulting Engineer of Los Angeles.

PRODUCTS: The Vista District, on account of its fertile soil and ideal climatic conditions, is adapted to the growth of citrus and sub-tropical products. Conditions are especially favorable to the growing of lemons, which will be one of the chief commercial products. Vista has long been noted for its avocados, the earliest commercial avocado plantings in California having been made here. The avocado industry is very profitable, and it will share about equally with lemons in the ultimate plantings in the District. English walnuts, grapes, winter vegetables and deciduous fruits are also raised very successfully.

LAND OWNERSHIP: The present number of land owners, now about 200, will be greatly increased as soon as the various subdivisions have water piped to them. The larger holdings are at present in the hands of those experienced and financially able to handle such property, and have been improved wherever water is available.

Definite plans for creating numerous subdivisions are now being made and the demand for such tracts, since water is assured, fully warrants this public improvement.

SELLING DRIVE BREAKS PRICES

Sharp Blows Taken by Wide List of Stocks

New Developments Bullish; Sterling Climbs

Rails Resist Decline and Several Advance

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Stock prices crumpled today under the weight of heavy selling for both accounts, which was inspired by the growing belief that the recent rise had been overdone and that the technical condition of the market warranted a reaction. The sharpest breaks took place in the industrials and specialties, losses of 1 to 4 points being quite common, with a few issues showing even larger declines. Rails offered better resistance to pressure, several of the high-grade investment issues moving up to the highest levels in years. Total sales, which exceeded 2,350,000 shares, were the largest since December 5.

Brokers reported that the speculative excesses apparent in several stocks last week had led to extensive profit taking by conservative traders, which was accentuated by a renewal of bear attacks against those issues whose market position had been weakened by the recent almost perpendicular advance. The rapidity of the decline also resulted in touching off a number of stop-loss orders, which swelled the volume of trading.

There was nothing in the news to account for the selling, the principal financial developments of the day, namely, establishing of the highest rate by sterling since the war and the marked relaxation in money rates, being constructive in character. American Car and Foundry broke 15 points to 193 in reflection of speculative disappointment that the proposed split-up of the stock involved no change in the dividend rate. Net losses of 4 to 9 points took place in American Can, Dupont, General Electric, Radio Corporation, Universal Pipe, Worthington Pump, Commercial Solvents, General Asphalt, preferred, General Baking, Ludlum Steel, Nash Motors, Stromberg Carburetor and United States Cast Iron Pipe.

United States Steel common opened 3-4 higher at 123⅛, reacted 2 points from the top and then rallied to 120¾.

Strength of the high-grade rails indicated that the January reinvestment demand was making itself felt in those issues. "Big Four" soared over 14 points to a record high of 158. New York Central touched 122 3-4 and Illinois Central 118 3-4, the highest prices since 1910 and 1913, respectively. International Railways of Central America touched a record top for all time at 19 3-8.

Call money opened at 4½ per cent, eased to 4 and thence to 3½, where it closed. Time money and commercial paper markets held steady.

Chief interest in the foreign exchange market centered in the establishment of a new high for sterling since the war, above $4.76⅛, bringing it to within 10 cents of dollar parity. Other European rates were slightly reactionary, French francs dropping nearly 5 points to around 5.57 1-4 cents.

Water Bonds Are Offered by Syndicate

A syndicate composed of J. R. Mason & Co. of San Francisco, and Alvin H. Frank & Co. of Los Angeles, is today offering $1,500,000 Vista Irrigation District general obligation 6 per cent gold bonds. The bonds are due serially January 1, 1946 to 1965, are noncallable and are at 100 and interest for all maturities, to yield 6 per cent, exempt from all Federal income and California personal property taxes.

The Vista district includes an area of 17,000 acres, situated in the foothill region about ten miles from the ocean near Oceanside, and between the cities of Los Angeles and San Diego. The major portion of the land within the district has been cultivated for half a century by dry farming or through privately owned and operated pumping plants. Modern paved highways and the Santa Fe Railroad afford favorable transportation facilities.

The bonds are the direct obligation of the district and are payable, principal and interest, from unlimited ad valorem taxes levied against all real property within the district, under the same authority as school taxes, and rank ahead of all mortgages, present and future, including mortgages securing Federal land bank bonds.

Bond proceeds will provide funds for the installation of a complete modern underground pressure pipe water distributing system, the water to be distributed for domestic purposes and for the irrigation of orchards and vegetable garden farms. The water supply is secured from the Henshaw reservoir under perpetual contract at a price which compares favorably with water costs in other highly developed sections of Southern California.

HOMELESS TRIO LIVE IN SUBWAY

Children's Suffering Drives Mother to Ask Aid

Deserted, Lives Two Weeks in Cars and Stations

Police Contribute for Needs of Destitude Family

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—A frail girl of 21 years of age, thinly clad and blue with cold, staggered into the Liberty-avenue police station in Brooklyn. In her arms she held a baby of twelve months. Clinging to her ragged dress was a little boy two years of age.

The girl held out a wan hand in a pitiful gesture and her lips trembled before she was able to speak. Lieut. Duffy, on duty, looked down from his huge desk.

"What can I do for you, madam?" he said.

"Food," the woman whispered. A patrolman supported her as she swayed, and another took her little girl from her arms.

When she and her two children had eaten ravenously, the girl said she was Mrs. Mary Piecitio and that she and her children, Clement and Clara, had been living in subway trains during the day and sleeping in subway stations with newspapers for covering since Christmas Eve.

She explained that her husband had deserted her five months ago, since when she had lived with friends and relatives. But stress of circumstances forced her to the streets Christmas Eve.

After she had been made comfortable through a collection the men at the station took up for her, Mrs. Piecitio was sent to the Osanam Home for Friendless Women, Brooklyn. The children were sent to Kings County Hospital.

HOUSE OF DAVID DENIES PURCHASE

BENTON HARBOR (Mich.) Jan. 5.—Denial of reports that the House of David had purchased Ridgewood Farm, at Old Mission, Mich., near Traverse City, with an idea of establishing a colony there, was made by M. S. Tyler, a member of the board which now controls the cult.

At the same time Tyler announced the organization had retained J. Hamilton Lewis, former United States Senator from Illinois, to represent it in its fight against the affirmation of the United States District Court verdict granted in Grand Rapids to John W. Hansel and wife for $20,000. The Hansels sued to collect payment for services given while they were members of the colony here.

SENSATIONAL CASE

The trial opened up one of the most sensational court hearings in Michigan history. It also paved the way for criminal proceedings against Benjamin Purnell, former head of the cult, on charges of carrying on immoral practices within the colony. Purnell disappeared and has not been located. The theory that he is dead has been advanced.

Mr. Tyler's denial of reports that the colony had purchased property in the north is taken here to mean that the cult does not contemplate further expansion, and that it will continue its efforts to retain control of its extensive Berrien county holdings. The State is seeking to drive the cult out of Michigan.

TO BUILD HOTEL

Substantiation of this theory is seen in the announcement by Tyler that the colony is ready to proceed with the construction of the major wing of its proposed eight-story downtown hotel. The first unit of the building is finished.

"Plans are complete, and more than half the stone and other material is in readiness. We will go ahead in 1925 if we are not attacked from every quarter," Tyler declared.

FISHERIES SCHOOL

A school of fisheries to be established at Halifax, N. S., by W. Henry Robertson, American Consul-General at Halifax, is described in a late number of School Life, a publication of the Interior Department, Bureau of Education. A portion of King's wharf will be transferred to the biological board and a large building remodeled and converted into a school building and biological station.

A staff of scientists will be appointed by the biological board of Canada, and the school will function in co-operation with Dalhousie University and with the Nova Scotia Technical College. A scientific station will be maintained at St. Andrews, N. B. It is expected that the school will be valuable as an experiment station, providing information and advice for the fishing industry.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Unexpected Strike

It is well known that Lord Cowdray is greatly interested in attempts made from time to time to discover petroleum in the British Isles.

One day an engineer at one of the English "bores" sent him along a sample of crude oil and asked him to have it analyzed.

Lord Cowdray called a maid and told her to take the bottle to a firm of analytical chemists. The girl put the bottle down on a shelf while she went to put on her hat. When she came back—

Anyway, a few days later Lord Cowdray received a telegram: "Congratulations. Your fortune is made. You have struck paregoric."—[Exchange.

Familiar Signs

On his tour of the district an inspector of the city high schools came before a class of girls. He wrote upon the blackboard, "LXVX." Then peering over the rims of his spectacles at a good-looking girl in the first row, he queried:

"Young lady, I'd like to have you tell me what that means."

Liquidation in Grains Brings Slight Decline

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Scattered liquidation was on in the grain markets, and while a good part of the news on wheat was bullish, the finish was about the bottom, with net losses of ¼@3¼, the latter on May, which finished at 1.74@1.74¼. July was 1.52@1.52¾ and September at 1.44⅝. Corn was 1⅞@2 lower, with May 1.36¼@1.36, July at 1.39⅝@1.39⅞ and September at 1.35⅜. Oats were 1@1¼ and rye 2¼@3¾ lower.

The break in wheat brought in the best export demand for domestic wheats in some time, with sales estimated as high as 1,000,000 bushels, including 145,000 bushels to Bulgaria. This led to considerable buying and bulge at one time, but such rally found plenty of wheat for sale and at the low point May showed 10¾ cents under the top and 3¾ cents under the first high. There was a change in sentiment noted during the day, with a feeling in some quarters that the market had had its break, but on the whole a majority of commission houses remain bearish.

Technical position remains the main factor in the market, and was largely responsible for the liquidation and the decline. Statistics were favorable to holders, the visible supply decreasing 2,500,000 bushels for the week. It is 81,492,000 bushels, as against 74,804,000 bushels last year. Stocks on ocean passage were reduced 2,300,000 bushels, while world's shipments of 16,160,000 bushels were around 3,000,000 bushels less than the average requirements of Europe. Liverpool closed ¼@¾d lower, with March wheat there quoted at 1.96⅝ at the last, or 23½ cents over Chicago May. Northwestern markets were weaker than Chicago, with Minneapolis off 3@3⅜ and Winnipeg 3¾@3¾.

Persistent liquidation was on in corn, and while there was a good class of buying at times, May touched 1.35⅜ on the break, a new low on the present movement. The cash basis was easy, and the visible supply increased 2,371,000 bushels, making the total 18,373,000 bushels, against 9,708,000 bushels last year. There was some selling by a leading local operator which was regarded as short grain. Eastern cash demand is still slow.

Oats showed independent weakness, with some of the best buyers of late on the selling side, and with sto-loss orders uncovered, the finish was about the bottom. An increase of 692,000 bushels in the visible supply brought the total up to 73,128,000 bushels, or nearly 31,000,000 bushels more than last year.

Scandinavian countries were in the market for rye and took 300,000 bushels in the aggregate, but this buying had little effect on futures, which closed about the bottom on scattered liquidation.

Liquidation was on in lard and ribs, and with a doubling of stocks of lard at western packing points in December, there was limited support on the way down, the finish being at net losses of 35@75 on lard and 55@67½ on ribs, while bellies were 10@37½ lower. Numerous stop-loss orders were caught on the way down.

MAKING A STUDY OF PHYSIOLOGY OF WORRY

Many of the larger phenomena that frightened the caveman because he did not understand the cause of them, leave us unmoved. On the other hand, so complicated has existence become that an apparently trivial matter such as the lack of a postage stamp at an important moment can cause intense worry, and may even bring on an attack of acute nervous prostration.

To some extent scientific knowledge has increased our disposition to worry. When man was unaware of the complex workings of his internal organs he could not worry about them. Nowadays a very little knowledge is sufficient to persuade a nervous individual that he has valvular disease of the heart or brain trouble. Similarly, it is possible in these days of ever-growing knowledge for the child to grow out of its unreasoning fear of the dark and ghosts into an equally disturbing adult fear of the unknown and its alleged inhabitants.

Apart from worrying about fundamental things, such as the means of livelihood and the welfare of those we love, we worry, and often with reason enough, about more subtle things that have come within the range of our extended and refined senses, but which we are often unable to understand. Fine shades of conduct, intricate relationships with other people, questions of taste and judgment are matters that frequently loom so large in people's lives that they temporarily exhaust the power of clear thinking and give rise to worry. Not only within the individual, but without him as well, there is ample material for the more generalized kind of worry. People who are entirely care-free in the personal sense frequently worry about some idea or sequence of ideas thrust suggestively out at them from a myriad-sided world filled to the brim with perplexing ideas and matter too difficult for less than extraordinary powers of thinking.

The physiology of worry shows it to be one of the gravest strains that can be imposed upon the brain of man. It is an undue concentration that tends to unbalance the whole mental machine.

The whole of the mental machine tends to pivot upon its weakest spot and a dangerous state of instability immediately arises.—[F. O. Odie in T. P.'s & Cassell's Weekly.

WELL ONE DAY IN BED THREE

That Was the Life of Mrs. Hollister Until she Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wyandotte, Michigan.—"After my baby was born I did not do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my right side and it was so bad I was getting round shoulders. I would feel well one day and then feel so bad for three or four days that I would be in bed. One Sunday my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend told her to tell me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it did not hurt any one to take it. I am always recommending the Vegetable Compound to others and I always have a bottle of it on hand."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R.F.D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Mich.

Unreachable and Untouchable by Storms

Mausoleum Interment Provides Enduring Protection of the Dead Against the Elements

How many of us have stood at the open grave of a departed loved one in a beating rain, to see that dear form lowered into the fast filling excavation? It is a harrowing experience, and the memory will not fade. Such conditions are impossible under the Mausoleum method of sepulture, where bodies are laid reverently away in individual crypts in a beautiful building — beyond the reach of the elements—to come to their dissolution gradually and naturally, amid surroundings of such peace and quiet.

How many of us have desired again and again to visit the grave of one who was once near and dear to us but has been prevented by a storm—finally to go, and try to repair the damage done by the elements and get things into decency and order again? This can never happen to those whose departed are entombed in granite, marble and reinforced concrete Mausoleums, where the sweet fresh air is undisturbed by storm, where perpetual care provides and maintains exquisite order and dignified peace, where every provision is made for those who would lay away, or visit their dead in quiet serenity and comfort.

Something to think about, against the common lot which the future holds. It is as customary now for thoughtful people to provide beforehand for the proper disposition of the body after death as it is to make a will. Helpful information, by word and illustration, will be found in the booklets of the California Mausoleum Co. Telephone for one. MAin 1534, or call at the Offices, 206 Harris Bldg., 110 West 11th St., where arrangements may be made to visit the Mausoleums.—[Advertisement.

RABBIS DIFFER ON DR. ELIOT'S ADVICE

Jewry stood divided yesterday concerning the advice of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, who in a recent address deplored the tendency among American Jews to intermarry with Christians and to forsake the traditions of their race.

With reservations Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, agreed with Dr. Eliot, and Rabbi Samuel Schulman, of Temple Beth-El, took issue with him. Rabbi Wise hailed Dr. Eliot's advice as the soundest which could be given and added his criticism of those Jews who "apparently dread being too loyal to their race."

But, Dr. Wise explained, Dr. Eliot did not mean that the Jews should not become assimilated Americans, but rather that they should not be assimilated by things un-American and at the same time lose their Jewishness. The advice that Jews should not intermarry was offered in order that the totality which is the Jewish factor in American civilization be not impaired, he held.

On the other hand, Dr. Schulman pointed out that the advice "makes us uneasy, because it intimates that if we mix too much with the non-Jewish world we may be doing it harm."

"After all," he continued, "does there not peep through the cultured language of Dr. Eliot the peculiar teaching of the Ku Klux Klan? If I understand the platform of the Klan it is this: That only men and women of Anglo-Saxon descent can be considered the only pure Americans.

"All other people, though tolerated, though perhaps protected in their civil and political rights, cannot be considered Americans. Such a doctrine eventually would lead to the undermining and destruction of even their civil and political rights.

"We deny the right of any man to speak of us Jews—certainly of us who are natives and all of us who have accepted the great privilege of naturalization—as belonging to a foreign nation.

"We are not foreigners. We do assimilate. Though we are not afraid of being destroyed as Jews through assimilation, we find nothing in our racial individuality which prevents us from accepting the forms of American life. And we certainly find nothing in our religion which prevents us from being whole-souled and unhyphenated Americans."

Both rabbis agreed that Dr. Eliot was wrong in his statement that intermarriages between Jews and Christians always ended in failure.—[New York Herald Tribune.

More Books Published

Though nearly 4000 publications gave up the ghost in the last fiscal year, enough new ones were started so that there was a net increase of about 300. This makes the total number of periodicals and papers of all kinds which are admitted to the mails as "second-class matter" a little over 28,000, according to the report of the Postmaster-General. It will be interesting to see what effect the radio, the cross-word puzzle and the chestnut blight will have on the number of publications for the new year.—[Pathfinder.

JURY APPROACH HEARING TODAY

Three to Testify in McCoy Trial Tampering Case

Apfel Statement of Offer of Money Basis of Action

Suspect Asserts His Words Were Misconstrued

The asserted effort to tamper with a member of the jury which recently convicted Kid McCoy will be placed before the county grand jury today, it was learned yesterday when subpoenas were issued to three persons.

Those ordered to appear are John J. Apfel of 1249 West Thirty-fifth Place, the juror; Miss Lee Hale, 1402 Vista street, Apfel's stenographer, and Wilbur Campbell, 614 South Alvarado street.

The matter will be handled by Chief Deputy District-Attorney Ford, who prosecuted McCoy. The investigation began during the progress of the trial, but action was delayed until after a verdict had been reached.

REPORTED TO JUDGE

Apfel reported the asserted attempt to influence his vote to Judge Crail and Mr. Fricke. The juror refused to agree to a verdict of manslaughter for McCoy, having held for acquittal until the last.

Fricke, it is understood, will testify that she received a telephone message from a man asking for Apfel and that the caller left his telephone number, with the request that Apfel communicate with him. Apfel's testimony, it is believed, will be that he was engaged in a business conversation in which the caller said he wished to talk about the McCoy case, and in answer to the juror's protest asked him if he would be interested if there was "big money in it." Apfel thereupon concluded the conversation.

SUSPECT APPEARS

The man in question, whose name was given by Apfel, is understood to have made a statement to the District Attorney's office, at which time he said that his remarks were misconstrued.

Apfel will appear in Judge Crail's court Friday for sentence, at which time his attorney, H. L. Gee, will present arguments for a new trial. The manslaughter verdict was returned by the jury on an indictment charging murder in the death of Mrs. Tarsem Mora.

Proceedings against McCoy, who faces counts of assault with intent to commit murder and two counts of robbery will go to trial February 16, next, before Judge Crail, these last being the result of McCoy's activities in connection with the day after Mrs. Mora's death.

E. G. LEWIS ADJUDGED BANKRUPT

Promotor of Palos Verdes Estate Denies Liabilities Total Nine Millions

Federal Judge James Yesterday signed an order adjudging E. G. Lewis of Los Angeles and Atascadero, a bankrupt. Last week Lewis filed a bankrupt's stipulation agreeing to such an order. The court ordered him to file a schedule of liabilities and assets within ten days. The case has been referred for adjudication to W. Preston Butcher, Jr., referee in bankruptcy, at Santa Barbara.

In his bankrupt's stipulation, Lewis placed his assets at more than $1,000,000. He denied his liabilities were $9,000,000 as averred by Carl Belmont and other creditors who filed a petition in bankruptcy against Lewis. A. R. Rutherford has been named as receiver of the properties owned and controlled by Lewis.

Lewis owns and controls extensive properties at Atascadero. He was the original promoter of the Palos Verdes estate. In their petition for a receiver, the creditors said Lewis has recently been engaged in attempting to promote a merger of all his interests by organizing a merger corporation.

LARGE SUM ASKED IN OIL WELL SUIT

Keck Syndicates Bring $400,000 Action Against Mutual Company

Irving V. Augur and others doing business under the name Mutual Oil Association were named defendants in a suit for $400,000 filed yesterday in Superior Court by W. H. Rimmer and other officials of Keck Oil Syndicates. The suit was based on the ground the defendants had failed to operate with due diligence two oil wells which had been drilled on land leased from the plaintiffs.

The wells, which were said to be in the center of a proved field, produced oil in paying quantities for about five months, but then went off production, according to the complaint, which recited the wells would have continued to produce large quantities of oil if properly handled. The plaintiffs fixed the amount sued for as the remuneration they would have received from the lease if, according to their complaint, the wells had been operated with due diligence.

Vandegrift of the university will speak on "The Presidio as a Frontier Institution."

DOZEN MISSING IN GALE AT SEA

Local Ship and Crew Feared Lost in Hurricane

Vessel Torn from Convoy Off Mexican Coast

O'Shannon Vance Reported to be Week Overdue

Fear that the three-masted fishing schooner O'Shannon Vance and her crew of twelve may have been lost off the Mexican coast during the terrific southeaster that caused havoc to shipping along the coast recently was expressed in shipping circles at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday.

The schooner was last seen on December 24 last when she broke away from her convoy, the power schooner Westerner and was carried to sea in the storm. Since then none of the scores of fishing vessels that ply between the Mexican Coast and Los Angeles Harbor have reported sighting her. The Westerner arrived here on December 29, after battling the storm for days.

LEAVES CONVOY

The O'Shannon Vance left Turtle Bay, Mex., about 800 miles from here, on December 21, last, with the Westerner. The former vessel was under sail and the Westerner was under power. No trouble was encountered until December 24, last, when the sailing vessel broke away from the convoy craft.

The O'Shannon Vance carried a cargo of 250 tons of fish valued at $45,000. She is 145 feet long and 385 net tons. Her value is about $200,000. Built in 1885, she was outfitted some time ago with a complete refrigerating plant for taking care of her catches and was regarded as one of the finest vessels of her kind in the coastwise fishing trade. Her captain is N Wagner, known as one of the most able skippers in command of sailing vessels making Los Angeles Harbor.

HOPE IS HELD

Hope is still held out for the vessel by her owners, the Halfhill Packing Company of Long Beach. Charles Halfhill, president, stated yesterday. Mr. Halfhill admitted that the schooner was overdue a week and that she had broken away from her convoy but stated he is not alarmed.

Brandstatter is Suing Wife for Divorce

Suit for divorce was filed yesterday by Adolph E. Brandstatter, owner of several cafes in Los Angeles and vicinity. In his complaint against Mrs. Rose Brandstatter, he declares she deserted him December 9, 1923, and has refused to return. They were married in New York City in 1916. The complaint says there has been a property settlement and that no community property remains.

FIVE NEW JURISTS TAKE OVER DUTIES

Ready to Hear Cases

A TRIO of new Superior Court judges, a new justice of the peace and a woman police judge—the first in the city's history—were inducted into office yesterday.

Chief interest centered in the assumption of the bench in the women's department of the police court by Mrs. Georgia Bullock as the first feminine jurist in the city. She mounted to the bench to the acclamation of scores of friends and well-wishers who had assembled in the courtroom. A veritable wall of flowers met her as she entered the courtroom.

She had been assigned to the women's department at an organization meeting of all police judges at which Justice Pope was chosen as presiding justice of the police courts.

The other jurists who took their posts yesterday were Hugh J. Crawford, former police judge; J. Walter Hanby, former justice of the peace, and Walter S. Gates, who was elected to fill the unexpired term of Judge Shenk, and Joseph Marchetti, former Deputy District Attorney. The first three became Superior Court judges while Mr. Marchetti became a justice of the peace.

MERCY MARKS RULINGS

Police Judge Bullock, with feminine directness, turned at once to her work after mounting the bench. She arrived late in the afternoon and her first case was that of Rosa Alcaintor, charged with drunkenness. Mrs. Alcaintor stated that she had gone to a birthday party and that she had taken a few drinks there.

Justice Bullock dismissed the case with the statement that the evidence showed the defendant not to have been drunk to such an extent as to annoy anyone.

The new justice tempered her rulings with mercy similarly during the remainder of the session.

Flowery showers also greeted the other jurists when they assumed their respective benches. Judges Hanby and Crawford had been elected to their posts at the last election. Judge Crawford having been a veteran jurist in the Police Court and Judge Hanby having served a number of years as a justice of the peace.

SESSION BEGINS EARLY

Judge Hanby took the bench at the morning session and heard five cases before the noon recess was called. He was assigned to the department formerly presided over by the late Judge Paul Burks.

Judge Crawford, however, observed the provisions of the law to the letter and stepped behind the bench at precisely 2 p.m. He will hear law and motion matters which are called preliminary to the setting of civil cases for trial. This is one of the busiest departments in the court, since the judge is often called upon to pass upon sixty or more cases a day.

Judge Gates took over the duties of Department Twenty-seven, formerly presided over by Judge Guerin, who is now sitting in a nonjury civil trial court. He will hear alimony cases three days a week and on the remaining two will preside over lunacy commission hearings.

Justice Marchetti was a deputy district attorney before his appointment to the bench and is one of the youngest men to hold such a post. He is a brother of Roger Marchetti, local attorney.

Justice Marchetti's first case was one involving cross-word puzzles and other cross words. William T. Hunton was charged with using a book and violently upon the person of Arthur Fenton, after they had had a quarrel over the proper spelling of a twelve-letter word meaning a South American ring-tailed kazoo or something of the sort.

Fenton failed to appear to prosecute the charge, however, and Hunton was discharged. He promised the judge to confine himself to verbal remonstrances in future disputes and said he was sorry he had lost his temper.

BACK TO BAID SYSTEM

At the organization meeting of Police Court judges, it was voted unanimously to return to the old bail system in traffic cases. This procedure was abolished some time ago and traffic-law violators came directly to court for trial without depositing bail. The judge stated that this had resulted in congestion to an extraordinary degree and expressed the belief that a return to the old bail system will relieve this congestion.

Under this system traffic-law violators will be forced to report to the bail clerk after receiving a tag and to deposit bail with him. Police Judge Chambers was appointed to draw up a bail schedule for use by the bail clerk in traffic cases.

The bail system was discarded in order to assure the appearance of traffic violators in court, and it is expected that the new bail schedule will be somewhat higher than that in use formerly and stiff enough to cover any fine that is likely to be imposed.

SUBWAY WORK PLAN CHANGED

Rail Board Extends Period Allowed Company

Probability of System for City Considered

Pacific Electric Trains to Use Lower Level

Looking toward the probability of a subway system in Los Angeles in the near future the State Railroad Commission yesterday authorized the Pacific Electric to alter its plans for the Hill-street terminal of the Glendale Boulevard-Hill street tunnel now under construction. Completion of the tunnel work, which was scheduled for March 1, next, was extended to October 1 by the commission decision.

Under the new plan Pacific Electric trains will enter and leave the Hill-street station below the level of the street. This, the commission points out, will make it more feasible for Pacific Electric trains from Hollywood, Glendale and San Fernando points to connect directly with a general subway system of the near future.

LEVEL CHANGED

D. W. Pontius, general manager of the Pacific Electric, said last night that the commission originally authorized the railroad to bring trains into the Hill-street station at the level of the street. But it was deermined after making a complete survey, he said, that the right thing to do is to place the Hill-street terminal at subgrade so that it will fit in with any subway system that may be built.

The change of grading to carry out the new plan will require an additional expenditure of approximately $500,000, Pontius said.

TIME EXTENSION

Because of this change the commission permitted an extension of time of seven months in which to complete the work. Efforts of the Pacific Electric in the past to complete the bore in record time are commented on by the commission in the present decision.

As to what nature of building will be erected on the Hill-street station site to handle the new traffic no definite plans have been worked out, Pontius declared. Plans for the building have not been prepared and he would not estimate the cost of the construction.

Chest Campaign Worker to Face Forgery Charge

Various sums intended for the Community Chest found their way into his own pocket, Jack Rose is said to have admitted yesterday to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Lucas, who drew a complaint against him. The complaint, which Mr. Lucas planned to file in Justice Court today, charges forgery of a fictitious name. It was an indorsement on a check for $250, drawn by A. Hays Bush to the order of the secretary of the Community Chest.

Rose admitted, according to the Deputy District Attorney, cashing this check and several others and keeping the money.

Woman Injured in Bridge Crash Seeks Damages

An echo of the collapse, March 27, 1924, of the bridge across the Arroyo Seco at Avenue Twenty-six, was heard in Superior Court yesterday when Mrs. Ethel Elston filed suit for $15,000 damages against the city.

Mrs. Elston declared she was riding in an automobile on the structure when it fell to the bottom of the arroyo, and that she received serious injuries as a result of the accident. She was joined in the suit by her husband, Joseph H. Elston. The city was held to have been negligent in permitting traffic across the bridge.

FATHER'S PLEA WINS BACK RUNAWAY BOY

Guy Mason, a 16-year-old runaway, returned yesterday to the home of his father, H. T. Mason, at 836 West Santa Barbara avenue, a report to the Sheriff's office said. He was drawn back by his father's plea in The Times in which the father expressed sorrow for the differences they had had. Mason admitted to Deputy Sheriffs Stensland and Weir he had been too strict with the boy and if he would return they would understand each other better.

HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

GLOBE (Ariz.) Jan. 5.—T. B. Johnson has been arrested charged with the murder of a Yaqui goat herder in his employ. The crime is said to have been committed near Miami on May 13, 1923.

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

ANOTHER milestone has been passed.

During my long and wicked career, I have been slammed, hammered and rebuked for about everything I ever said. For the first time, I have been swatted for saying nothing.

A San Diego gentleman demands to know why I have said nothing in this column about the Notre Dame-Stanford football game. He expressed the belief that my treachery is due to one of two causes: either I lost money on the game, or I hate the Irish.

Both charges are false. Being of Scotch extraction, I wouldn't risk money betting on anything. And nobody could hate the Irish.

The best way out of the difficulty is to hasten to mention the game right now. Nice game! Nice Notre Dame! Nice Stanford!

Now we are all loving friends again.

OH, FLAPPERS; FLAPPERS

Some one else writes a letter not so easily answered. He wants to know what can be done about the extravagances of high school girls in the matter of dress. Just after I find out how to do away with wars forevermore; and adjust a few other relatively easy tasks, I will suggest a way to restrain the vanity and selfishness of flappers.

—o—

THE FAMILY BUDGET

As a part of the business courses, flappers—of both sexes—are educated in the matter of family budgets.

They start with Pa's income—known only to the young lady doing the figuring—and allow so much for the house expenses—so much for Father—so much for Mother—so much for the angel daughter.

When she knows just what her share is, a flapper has to be more than ordinarily selfish and greedy to make demands over that limit.

They tell me that this unique plan has had the most gratifying results.

FORTS THAT SAVE US

I can feel the spirit of my old friend, Gen. Homer Lea, sending down thunderbolts of wrath from his home in the skies.

The War Department has announced the intention of putting still heavier guns in the forts at San Pedro.

—o—

HAVE THEY BLUNDERED?

In his military writings, Gen. Lea was scornful of these forts. He said they were a danger; not a protection.

It was his theory that an enemy army would never invade Los Angeles from any point except the beach at Santa Monica.

A modern fort is helpless if attacked from the rear. Gen. Lea contended that an invading army would swarm into Los Angeles and that these forts would fall like candy soldiers. Thereafter, he said, the invader would use these fortifications as a part of a port of refuge where they could refit their transports.

His idea was that the proper way to protect Los Angeles was by heavy howitzers mounted on railroad cars with shore batteries concealed back of Santa Monica and Venice; the heavy guns to compel the enemy ships to stand eight or ten miles off shore; the shore batteries to annihilate the landing parties coming ashore in small boats.

ANOTHER CONTEST TOMORROW!

SANTA MONICAN DIES IN RINCON CAR CRASH

Charles E. Mize of Santa Monica was killed instantly last evening in a collision between his car and one containing members of the Philharmonic Orchestra, on their way to Santa Barbara for a concert. The smash-up took place on the Rincon highway six miles north of Ventura. Clyde Mendelsohn, a member of the orchestra, was cut by flying glass, but not seriously.

Mize was driving a light touring car loaded with camping equipment and traveling, according to witnesses, at high speed. He was bound south. On a curve, it was declared, he attempted to pass another southbound car, and he lost control of his own car. It plunged across the road, striking a heavy touring car containing the orchestra members.

Alfred Brain, driver of the orchestra car and member of the orchestra, was taken by Undersheriff Walker of Ventura county before Dist.-Atty. Henderson for questioning and was at once released. The musicians proceeded by stage.

George E. Bens, who, it is charged, drove his car into a crowd near Angelus Temple Sunday evening, injuring seven women, was accused of driving while intoxicated in a complaint yesterday issued by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Murray. Benz is in the County Jail. Detective Lieutenant Condoffer was the complaining witness. The victims of Benz's asserted wild driving were all alive last night.

Rev. Rush E. Crissman, 50 years of age, 1829 West Forty-third street, died in the General Hospital yesterday from injuries. According to a police report he was struck down at Forty-third Place and Western avenue the night of December 31 in a traffic accident.

VICTIMS' CONDITION

PLEA FOR POLICE UP TODAY

Council Committee Expected to Recommend Half of Additions Asked. Due to Low Funds

The City Council today is scheduled to consider Chief of Police Heath's request for 400 additional policeman. The recommendation of Chairman Musbet and Councilmal Baker of the Finance Committee is expected to be that the Chief's request be cut half, on account of lack of finances, although they agree that more police are needed.

Chief Heath declared that many policemen are needed to relieve officers who are now working on traffic. He pointed out that burglary insurance has gone up 50 per cent because the city is inadequately policed. New officers appointed will be placed on traffic, placing patrolmen back on their beats.

Three years ago there were 500 men in the Police Department. Today there are 2400. The recommendation of the finance committee that 200 new officers be authorized will relieve the situation as much as possible with finances as they are, it is said.

LIGHT CONTEST AWARDS GIVEN

First and Second World Prizes to Pacific Coast Pupils

Electric Club Ceremony is Held at Biltmore

One more evidence of the fact that Los Angeles is the home of children of light was given at the Biltmore yesterday when officials of the Electric Club presented prizes aggregating $490 to three school boys and two school girls for their winning compositions in the Home-Lighting Essay Contest, recently conducted by the electrical industry in the United States and Canada.

Jack M. Radkey, 11 years of age, in grade A7 of the John Burroughs Junior High School, was given a check for $250, the second California State prize, and another check for $75 as first prize in Los Angeles District No. 18.

The fourth State prize of $75 and the second District prize of $50 was won by Norman Ringer, 13, a pupil of the Arlington Heights grammar school. Nellie Yvonne McManess, 16, of Belmont High School, was awarded the Third District prize of $25.

Harriet Elizabeth Smith, 16, a pupil of the Low Junior Class of Gardena High School, won the Fourth District prize of $10 while the Fifth District prize of $5 was won by Alphonse E. Lammens, 11, a pupil of the Thirty-sixth street school.

Brief addresses on the educational and hygienic value of the contest were made by K. B. Van Kuren, Frank N. Smith and J. H. Jamison who also expressed their gratification over the fact that the first and second international prizes were won by children of the Pacific Coast. Winners of the first and second prizes were Julia Groo of Portland, Or., and George R. Pisarco of Oakland.

Judges of the Los Angeles District essays were Principals Charles B. Moore of the Franklin High School, Miss Ethel Andrus of Lincoln High School, Miss Catherine Carey of John Muir Junior School, W. W. Tritt of Belmont High School and W. A. Dunn of Polytechnic High School.

An address on "Books and Reading" was made by Dr. Carl S. Patton, pastor of the First Congregational Church who said that no man truly ashamed of his ignorance will remain ignorant long.

"Don't say you haven't time to read the great literature of the world," said the speaker. "Any man, no matter what his occupation, can become educated within three years if he will read for an hour and a half every night after his wife goes to bed."

NEW LINER FOR RUN TO BAY CITIES

Newport of Pacific Mail Passes Into Control of John Chapman

Another new passenger service between Los Angeles and San Francisco was announced yesterday, following the purchase by John Chapman of the liner Newport from the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. The Newport is of steel construction, 340 feet long and has a passenger capacity of 128 persons and the unusually large freight carrying space of 2000 tons as well as refrigerated space for limited cargo. She formerly operated between San Francisco, Los Angeles and Central American ports for the Pacific Mail Company.

On the southbound sailings, the Newport will also call at Santa Barbara, according to E. N. Torney, Southern California manager for Mr. Chapman, whose announcement of the new service followed his arrival from San Francisco yesterday.

The new service will be inaugurated on the 9th inst., when the Newport makes her first sailing southbound from Pier 54, to be followed by sailings every four days thereafter. She will arrive at Pier 90, Los Angeles Harbor, at 7 a.m., on the 11th inst., sailing north again the same night at 8 p.m., and arriving at San Francisco at 7 a.m. on the 13th inst. Every fourth day after the 11th inst., there will be another northbound sailing.

Accommodations for electric trolley service to meet the liner have been arranged with the Pacific Electric Railway Company, according to Mr. Torney, and facilities for prompt freight handling also arranged. Owing to the large freight carrying capacity, Mr. Torney said, the line could insure loading of all freight delivered at Berth 90 for shipment.

The rates will be the same as pertain to the Humboldt, also operated on a similar run by the White Flyer Line, Mr. Torney said. The latter has opened offices at Store No. 33, Spring Arcade, 541 South Spring street, Los Angeles.

Soiled Tiles

If you have an inexpensive mah jongg set and the wooden tiles have become very soiled, wash them carefully with a soft cloth and white soap. Dry on a towel and give them a coat of clear varnish. They will look better than new and the varnish will prevent their becoming soiled quickly. The quickest method of varnishing is to place the tiles in their trays, face up, and varnish a whole tray-full at once.

CHIEF OPENS SCHOOL FOR FIRE FIGHTERS

Fifteen Hundred Hook and Ladder Men Enrolled

Scholars at College of Blaze Prevention and Control

FIREMAN'S COLLEGE, established to teach local smoke-eaters the more scientific phases of fire prevention and control was yesterday officially opened by Fire Chief Ralph J. Scott, who explained fire-fighting apparatus to battalion chiefs and company officers at the opening session of the college at fire headquarters, 217 South Hill street.

Two hundred men, in groups of thirty, will attend the daily sessions, which will extend over a period of four months. During this time, fire officials expect to familiarize all attendants with the many fire-fighting accessories and thereby lay the foundation for even more intelligent and spontaneous fire-fighting methods. As each class completes the course, another group will be selected until all of the nearly 1500 members of the department have completed the course.

S. H. Dodd, second assistant chief, and Lieut. W. W. Tebbetts will have charge of all instruction and will be assisted by Lee H. Davis, deputy chief, who has long advocated such a college.

Warner Films Are Boked for Rialto Theater

The Rialto Theater henceforth will show Warner Brothers pictures through a booking arrangement completed yesterday, it was announced by J. L. Warner. This disposed definitely of a rumor that Warner Brothers had leased the theater.

Announcement was made also yesterday at Warner Brothers Studio that Bennie Ziedman has been added to the staff as associate executive to Jack Warner in supervising production. He will assume his new duties on the 10th inst. at which time he will leave his position as chief assistant to Julius Bernheim at Universal Studio. Ziedman at one time was associated with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford and produced ten independent films for Principal Pictures Corporation.

The association of Ziedman with Warner Brothers, is announced to be in keeping with an increase in the production program to thirty pictures during 1925 instead of the usual twenty.

OLD-TIME REMEDY RETURNS

There seems to have been a revival of the old-fashioned treatment of cupping which was generally resorted to for the cure of many ailments a half-century ago. In one of the main thoroughfares of a large eastern city, the proprietor of a fashionable barber-shop has put up a sign, "Cupping," and he is reaping the reward; Doctors have been resorting to the cupping process for some little while, but it is a simple operation requiring only experience and no technical training, so that an intelligent barber can perform the operation as well as any doctor, and from the patient's standpoint it is much more convenient and cheaper. One of the small veins of the arm is opened and the blood drawn off by an implement which exerts a slight suction. The claim is made that it is a relief for blood pressure.

TRIAL OF BALM SUIT BEGINS

Plaintiff in $10,000 Action Asserts Musician Failed to Keep Promise to Wed

Trial of Mrs. Susan Hurkett's $10,000 heart-balm suit against John Cappelletto, a musician, began yesterday in Judge Craig's department of the Superior Court.

Mrs. Hurkett was the principal witness yesterday. She stated that her romance with the musician began in May, 1923, when he brought a quart of ice cream to her apartment at midnight. In the process of eating the confection, she said, the musician turned to her and said that she had the figure of a young girl and a silvery laugh which entranced him. Mrs. Hurkett added naively that though past 50, she had always admired her own figure and voice and that the musician's statement served only to confirm her in her opinion.

As a result of his promise to marry her, she said, she became on intimate terms with him, but in November, 1923, he informed her he would not marry her. She fainted at this, she said, and when she recovered he told her that he was only joking and that he would keep his promise. They were to be married, she said, at Santa Barbara in November, 1923, but the musician failed to appear there on the wedding day.

Mrs. Hurkett is represented by Attorney Corwin A. Townsend and the musician by Attorney W. H. Dehm. Cappelletto denies proposing marriage to the matron, who has several children.

"THE MERRY HEART IS A GLADSOME THING"

Fortunately for the world its supply of Bottled Sunshine far exceeds that of its Wet Blankets. If this were not so what an unbearable place the world would be! Some lands, peoples and centuries are richer in it than others. Children and puppies and kittens and lambs and all young things (unless they be ill) are Bottled Sunshine. Precious stones and coal, flower buds and seeds and the kernels of fruit are Bottled Sunshine. Flashes of kindly wit and peals of laughter from out a merry heart are its very essence.

Beautiful, bewitching, attractive in an unstable, uncertain sort of way, are the dispositions of some people, of whom it may be said: "They have a mercurial temperament."

Better to be merry, to be known as Bottled Sunshine, with a heart as full of the joy and gladness of living as are the woods of singing birds in the springtime—[Montreal Family Herald.

ARMENIANS HAVE LONG SURVISED OTHER RACES

The Armenians have remained unshaken in all vicissitudes and by their courage have preserved until our days their nationality, their language and their customs, asserts Herbert Welsh in the New Armenia.

The races that the Armenians knew in their infancy have vanished from the face of the earth. Their brothers, the Phrygians, are today only a vague memory. Among the contemporaries of the Armenians, only the Hellenes, the Italiotes and the Gauls have survived, not, however, without undergoing many changes, and abandoning many of their former customs. Except the Greeks, one must seek the kinsmen of the Armenians among the nations who were brought from the steppes of the north toward the shores of the Mediterranean by the same flood that brought the ancestors of Haik toward Thrace.

It can clearly be seen that the titles of nobility of the Armenian race date back to more than 3000 years before our era, and that they are much more ancient than those of most of the European peoples. About the time when Rome was being founded, Haik, the eponymous hero of Armenia, led the Armenians to Ararat. The Persians were just commencing their political life when Armenia had already constituted herself a state.

GIRL BRAVES FLAMES

When a fire destroyed the telephone central office and the block on which it was located at Madill, Okla., Miss Bertha Dobbs, night operator, insisted on remaining at her post until officials and business men, whose property was in danger, could be notified. She was finally rescued by the firemen just before the roof of the exchange caved in, and was carried over the roof of an adjoining building. The lower floors had been burning for sime time and the switchboard room was filled with smoke, but Miss Dobbs's headset was still in position when the firemen carried her to safety.

STORM-RACKED SHIP DOCKS

Log of Gold Shell, Here from Japan, Tells of Worst Pacific Gale in Memory of Officers

The log of the tanker Gold Shell, which arrived yesterday from the Orient, reads like the nightmare of a sea-sick sailor, following a twenty-one day passage from Aomori, Japan, which her officers declare was the worst in their collective sea-going experiences. The Gold Shell herself, usually spick-and-span as a new yacht, appeared to have been subjected to years of buffeting by mountainous seas of boiling sea water.

Three of the ship's officers were on the sick list, two of them having been hurled out of their bunks during the gale, practically every man was nursing bruises, while everyone on board still showed the effects of six days without sleep.

NINETY-MILE GALE

From December 22 to 28, in mid-Pacific, the Gold Shell was in a northwest gale that blew at a velocity of ninety miles an hour for practically the entire period, according to the statements of her officers.

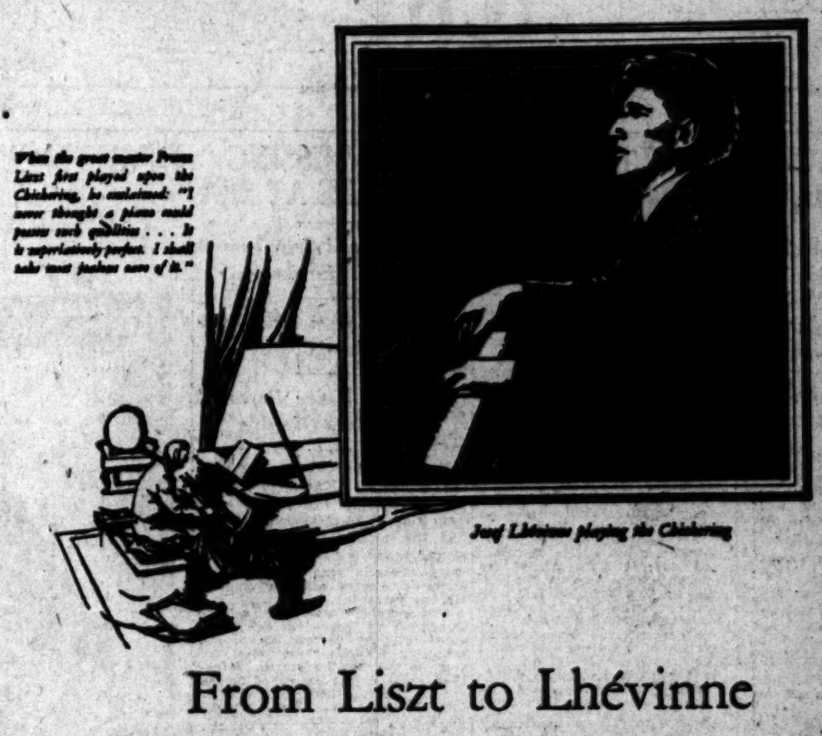
"Mountainous seas, ship laboring and rolling heavily, gale increasing," occur frequently in the log during the days of the storm.

The Gold Shell pitched so violently that her twelve-foot propeller was out of the water half the time. An engineer was standing a "throttle watch" constantly to keep the giant screw from tearing itself off the tail shaft as it come out of the sea. The ship rolled so heavily that two of her officers, Third Mate Frank Gawrych and Third Assistant Engineer Joseph Bertolani, were injured when thrown out of their berths; numerous members of her Chinese crew suffered similar injuries and all loose deck gear was washed into the sea.

STORM DELAYS START

Seas broke completely over the stern and bow of the 10,000-ton ship, riding fifty feet above the surface of the sea in ballast. Christmas dinner was passed in her saloon with her officers bracing themselves against the bulkheads to keep near the table and a half-dozen Chinese mess-boys running about in an endeavor to keep the food on the pitching board.

A blizzing snowstorm at Aomori held back the Gold Shell's departure nearly two days, according to Radio Operator G. A. Wiehr. She sailed from that usually balmy port on December 16. The Gold Shell, after loading 70,000 barrels of fuel oil at the local terminal of the Royal Dutch Shell Oil Company, will soil tomorrow for Hongkong.



Josef Lhévinne playing the Chickering

From Liszt to Lhévinne

Since long before the great master Liszt loved and used the Chickering, down to our own day, when such an artist as Lhévinne holds it in the same esteem, the career of this piano has been one long triumph.

Jenny Lind used the Chickering for her accompaniments. And Gottschalk, Thalberg, Gounod, Busoni, Carreño, Elly Ney, Dohnányi and many others during the century of its life have chosen the Chickering as a fitting inspiration for their genius. And all through these hundred and one years master craftsmen have been fashioning new beauties into this glorious instrument.

Perfect as a medium for the great pianists of the concert stage, the Chickering loses none of its superlative qualities when made in the sizes so sought for the home.

Chickering ESTABLISHED 1823

"Generous allowance will be made for your present piano in partial exchange, and very easy terms can be agreed upon for the remainder. Chickering prices range from $925 to $2500.

NAVY HELD NO DEFENSE FOR COAST

Shearer, Naval Expert Who Fought Warship's Sinking, Here to Study Conditions

The present inadequacy of this country's naval defenses leaves the Pacific Coast at the mercy of any sea power possessed of a well-equipped modern navy, in the opinion of William B. Shearer, naval expert of Washington, who was one of the principals in the suit brought to prevent the recent destruction of the new battleship Washington.

Mr. Shearer, now at the Ambassador, is a recognized authority on naval matters. He is on the Coast at this time to study conditions here with reference to the actual defense situation existing on the Pacific.

"Our navy is lacking in the number of first-class battleships," said Mr. Shearer. "For instance, we have only five ships equipped with guns capable of carrying 25,000 yards, while Japan has ten such vessels. In maneuvers conducted last fall it was revealed that our battle fleet speed did not exceed 18 knots an hour, while the average speed shown by the Japanese fleet has averaged twenty-two knots in similar maneuvers. Of course, we have individual vessels capable of greater speed tha nten knots, but the speed in battle formation must exceed that of the slowest boat.

"Our fuel oil reserves are considerable, we have only 1,759,677 barrels in storage at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, that could be used in emergency, or only about enough to last a month in case of hostilities at sea."

As a step in the direction of improving the naval defenses of the Pacific Coast, Mr. Shearer suggested that he believed the present naval base at Mare Island ought to be transferred to Alameda. Mare Island offers anchorage for only eight battleships at the same time, while at the Alameda Harbor, sixty-six ships could be accommodated," he explained.

He also advocates at least a year's supply of reserve oil of 3,000,000 barrels, and suggests a program for the material increase of all types of navy equipment not specifically barred by the 5-5-3 agreement. This includes especially aircraft and submarines, of which types of equipment the other parties to the agreement are busily making large additions to their present naval strength.

MORE than 100 of the finest blue-ribbon saddle horses in Southern California have been entered in the Beverly Hills horse show and equestrian pageant to be conducted along the Beverly Hills bridle path Saturday.

Work on a stadium designed to accommodate 5000 spectators was scheduled to begin today and will be rushed to completion before the end of the week. The structure will be erected at Sunset Boulevard and Roxbury Drive, the present western terminus of the bridle path, and in addition to 100 ringside boxes will contain a reserved section seating more than 3000 persons.

The pageant feature of the show will be given along the entire four-mile course of the bridle path and will be free to the public, according to Charles Adams, manager of the show.

In addition to more than a score of prizes to be awarded winners of the pageant entries twenty silver cups have already been subscribed for the feature events on the program which will be given in the stadium.

A number of jumping events have been placed on the program which are expected to bring out at least a dozen of the best jumpers in the West.

Entries to date include blue-ribbon horses from the stables of Reese Llewellyn, W. D. Longyear, Marco H. Hellman, Irving H. Hellman, W. A. Alderson, W. M. Armstrong, Alphonso E. Bell, Charles Boldt, Carlton Burke, Roland Bishop, Mrs. A. L. Cheney, W. J. Connery, LeRoy Edwards, Fred Harris, E. D. Hirsch, L. B. Hirsch, Jack Holt, Franklyn Hutton, E. C. Jessuriam, Kirk B. Johnson, Oscar Lawler, R. Z. Leonard, A. Lehr, Sol Lesser, George Lichtenberger, Avery McCarthy, Neil McCarthy, Walter G. McCarthy, W. J. McDowell, W. D. May, John Milner, Oscar Mueller, Joseph Musgrove, L. S. Nordlinger, Lee Phillips, W. E. Seeley, Everett Severt, Joe Toplitzky, George C. Thomas, John Treanor, Russell Taylor, John Vaughn, Ben Vinton, Jacob Vogt, William Weisman, Chandler Ward, Guy Woodin, Miss Dorothy Wellborn and others.

The motion-picture division, led by Hobart Bosworth, includes Rudolph Valentino, Jack Holt, Buck Jones, Hoot Gibson, Dustin Farnum, Tom Mix, Harry Carey, Jack Hoxie, Antonio Moreno, William S. Hart, Frank Mayo, Hal Roach, Pauline Frederick, Ruth Roland and others.

The show, which is being given under the joint auspices of the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce and the Bridle Path Association, is for the purpose of increasing interest in horseback riding and arousing interest in the development of a bridle path from Griffith Park to the sea.

After the horse show a movement will be started to develop approximately twenty-two miles of trails in Griffith Park into bridle paths and connect them with the present Beverly Hills equestrian course.

GIRL IN NEW DEATH MOVE

Grief Over Unhappy End of Romance With Married Man Prompts Second Leap From Pier

For the second time within three weeks, Dorothy Young, 22 years of age, has been frustrated in attempts to end her life by leaping into the ocean from the Redondo Pier. She was removed to her home at 602 West Fifty-eighth street yesterday under the care of a nurse after having been saved by Policeman Leslie Stewart of the Redondo police department.

Grief over the unhappy ending of her romance with Herschel Huff of Denver is given as the motive for her death attempts. Their marriage was annulled when Huff discovered that his first wife, whom he had thought dead, was still alive. He left Dorothy with the belief that he would obtain a divorce from his first wife and return to Los Angeles, so they could rewed. But months passed without any hopeful word.

SEIZED IN JUMP

On December 19, last, Dorothy, unable to bear unhappiness any longer, went to Redondo and walked to the end of the pier. Detectives Alden and Stiewel observed her remove her hat and coat. They seized her as she was about to leap into the water.

Sunday night she slipped away from home, evading a nurse who had been attending her, and went to Redondo Beach, the scene where she and Huff had spent their honeymoon days. She went halfway out on the pier and flung herself over the side into the breakers. A sailor on the pier saw the act and threw her a life preserver, to which she clung for a few minutes. Officer Stewart arrived, swam to her and held her afloat until a boat took them ashore.

TAKEN TO HOME

The girl, suffering from exposure in the cold water, was taken to the Hermosa-Redondo Hospital and yesterday redived to her home. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Young.

The mother yesterday refused to allow anyone to see Dorothy. She said her daughter's situation was due entirely to sorrow over her ruined marriage.

Awakens New Hope

Some enterprising California citizen discovered that goldfish are much more valuable in a pond of stagnant water than in a glass bowl. It is said that a few goldfish placed in sluggish water where mosquitoes breed will in one season eat every vestige of mosquito larvae, freeing the neighborhood of this pest. Just about the time we had given up all hope that this metallic-colored fish had any value other than as a parlor pet, along comes this news dispatch. There is hope for the gar pike yet.—[Detroit News.

Just Publicity

Six-year-old Dorothy was used to hearing more or less shop talk at home, both her parents being at one time in the advertising business.

Last Sunday she brought home a text from Sunday school. Her mother, seeing something in her hand, asked what she had. Dorothy replied, with a little shrug of her shoulders, "Oh, only an ad about heaven."—[Exchange.

Wife Says Mate Had Sweetheart in Las Vegas

A railroad man has almost as easy a time leading a double life as a sailor, in the opinion of Emma Halley White, who yesterday brought suit for divorce against James I. White. White had a run from Los Angeles to Las Vegas, Nev., according to his wife, who said she lived here and White's sweetheart lived in Las Vegas.

White objected because her face was wrinkled, she said. She asked him for money to buy some new teeth to fill out her sunken cheeks, but he refused and told her he had nothing to give a "long-faced Christian," the complaint asserts.

Arrives at Station in Taxi With Only Forty Cents in Change

"I'm drunk and I ought to be in jail. Lock me up."

This was the salute to Officer Leslie of the vice squad of a man who walked into Central Station yesterday describing himself as H. L. Massey, 34 years of age, a dairyman, of 1331 East Seventh street. Leslie consulted with Desk Sergeant Greeley; the officers decided the man was telling part of the truth anyway and complied.

Massey arrived at the station in a taxicab. After he had paid the driver he had 40 cents left.

ESPEE WILL AUTHORIZE BIG BUDGET

Pacific System Awarded Greater Part of Amount for Improvements

Of thirty-two railways having one-half of the mileage of the country, the Southern Pacific Company ranks first with an estimated total capital expenditure of $75,600,000 to be made during 1925, according to the Railway Age, which yesterday announced its annual report based on advance information given by transportation officials of the country.

Of the proposed expenditures announced by the Southern Pacific, $52,000,000 will be expended by the Pacific system and $10,600,000 by the Atlantic system in Texas and Louisiana. Total capital expenditures of the railways for improvements and equipment this year will be about 15 per cent greater than in either 1923 or 1924. The improvement plans of most of the railroads for the year are based upon anticipated business.

In commenting on the Southern Pacific's expansion and new construction, President William Sproule said: "With the company it has been a year of expansion, adding to our operations the lines heretofore operated by the El Paso and Southwestern and by the Arizona Eastern Railroad, with new construction in Southern Oregon and on the Central Pacific in California. This expansion will continue in railroad construction during 1925.

"This work is being done because of the faith in the future of the country we serve, faith in our ability to serve the people of this country well and faith in the officers and employees to promote and build up the interest of the company by teamwork and by constant care of the people and property making use of this railroad. We invite and urge the people to use our railroad and it is our work to make its use very satisfactory to them.

"We have been adding passenger and freight cars and engines, all of the newest and best type. In summing up records of operating efficiency in 1924: (1) we handled more tons to the train; (2) we handled more tons to the locomotive; (3) we had less casualties in train service; (4) we had less casualties in other service; (5) we had less casualties measured by million man hours. For the increase in tons handled per train and per locomotive the heavy and very fine engines furnished for the work have been partly responsible, but credit is also due to the men and officers."

Of the expenditures to be made by the Southern Pacific during 1925 one of its major projects will be the construction of the new double track in Arizona involving from $14,000,000 to $16,000,000. Work on this project, which will place Phoenix on the railway's main transcontinental line, began yesterday at Picacho. In Southern California the expenditures include the construction of additional block-signal systems, completion of water terminals at San Pedro and Long Beach, the completion of the less-than-carload lot freight station at Vernon at a cost of $100,000, completion of the local classification yards, construction of new rolling stock.

FAR NORTH ALSO HAS ITS "EMERALD ISLE"

Were not the title pre-empted, Kodiak, in the Katmai district of Alaska, might have been called the "Emerald Isle" quite as well as Ireland, for its situation in the Pacific is similar to that of Ireland in the Atlantic Ocean, is the assertion made by a writer in the Washington Star.

Although the island of Kodiak is 100 miles from Mt. Katmai, which in June, 1912, gave one of the most tremendous volcanic explosions ever recorded, it was buried nearly a foot deep in ash. The ashy blanket transformed the "Green Kodiak" of other days into a gray desert of sand, but after a period of two years the ash-laden hillsides were again covered with verdure finer than ever before.

In the words of a resident of Kodiak, "Never was such grass known before, so high or so early. No one ever believed the country could grow so many berries, nor so large, before the ash."

The island owes its climate, as does Ireland, to the tropical ocean current which bathes its shores. The eastern half of the island is occupied by a forest of spruce, whose trees reach a great size. Then comes luxuriant grass land, equal to any grazing land in the United States, and finding a parallel only in the "guinea grass" of the tropics.

PRESERVING TREES

Large wounds in trees made by the removal of branches of considerable diameter may be protected by painting the cut surface with a heavy coating of white lead. A large number of waxes, paints and washes have been tried and the conclusion has been drawn that any substance which is not corrosive or detrimental to growth and which will protect the heartwood from the attacks of rot spores, will prove a satisfactory covering for a cut surface. Among such substances may be mentioned white lead, yellow ocher, coal tar and grafting wax.

HORS D'OEUVRE

The four horsemen of Notre Dame are not hors de combat. Their names are said to be Pepper, Salt, Ginger and Mustard.

THE LIGHT THAT SHINES

We are now sending more than 15,000,000 incandescent lamps abroad every year. Which is one way of letting our light so shine that men may see our good works.

ON THE HIGHWAY

England is spending nearly $300,000,000 a year on its roads and, as they have been in fair condition for some time, the results are excellent. The British highways are attractive to motorists and they come from afar to jaunt through a country that is rich in history and romance and yet sufficiently modern to provide easy passage.

SEEING THINGS

Shell-rimmed glasses are just becoming popular in the Far East and many persons who do not need or cannot wear glasses are mounting their beaks with empty rims after the manner of Harold Lloyd. In Asiatic Turkey some of the houris are using these horn-rimmed eye-strainers in place of a veil. The outlook for the spectacle men is still excellent.

LIFE IN LONDON

Likewise London is beginning to worry over the problems of street traffic. Last year on an average nearly two persons a day were killed in accidents upon the highways of the world's metropolis. This is no great number considering the vast population of the city, but the increase in tragedies has been so large and so sudden that the staid Britishers are disturbed. They are going to do something about it. They are not sure what it will be, but whatever rules they make will be enforced. They do not mean to lose the reputation of being slow but sure.

EASY HOMES

Give 'em time. If people can obtain homes upon the easy installment plan it is a strong help to the permanency of domestic life. Give a man a home and a wife and he has something worth working and fighting for. The government is encouraging settlers on irrigated lands. The lands may be had at appraised prices—spread over eighty or more equal payments. In Costa Rica the government is building decent little homes for the poor. They are sold at almost nominal figures and the payments are spread over 100 installments. These things are fine stabilizers for any country.

EARTHQUAKES AND STATURE

One of the most interesting of modern-day amusements is watching the deductions that men of science are bringing to bear on the every-day facts of existence. Their last startling discovery is that the late earthquakes in Tokio have had a marked physical effect on the Japanese race. As a result they have found that not only the babies but the school-going boys and girls have grown shorter and broader. A test was taken of 200,000 pupils. Japan is an earthquake region. Therefore, once upon a time the Japanese may have been veritable giants. But what will be left of them in another thousand years if they cannot turn off the recurrent earthquakes? What will they resemble when the shortening and broadening process has been carried to the ultimate limit?

INFANT INDUSTRIES

Mrs. Miriam Ferguson is renting her home, now that she is to live at the capital, and some of her fellow-citizens are criticising her because, in offering her home for lease, she stipulated in the advertisement that no children would be permitted. If children are not welcome in the home of the Governess of the broad and magnificent commonwealth of Texas, where, for mercy's sake, may they find a haven? Mrs. Ferguson says she likes children, but, as they do not have much respect for paint, wall paper and furniture, she does not intend to turn her home over to a family with youngsters. If she had been a seasoned politician she would have rented the house without any ado or publicity. As it is, she has furnished the opposition press with an opportunity to criticise her for deprecating the State's infant industry.

PUTTING ON BRAKES

It is expected that the chief fiscal officers of the various States will gather in conference at Washington within a few weeks. An average reduction of 27 per cent in Federal taxation has been accomplished during the Coolidge regime, but that has been more than overcome by the increases in State and local taxation. There has been no real easing of the burden. In the last five years State and municipal charges have more than doubled in every section of the country. The President has been practically the only efficient exemplar of economy. It is felt that if a general conference of major officials were held at the capital something of real importance to the burden-bearers might be evolved. President Coolidge might roll back his cuffs and show how he does it. Immediate retrenchment is imperative in the local expenditures in nearly all the communities of our fair but expensive land.

CHILD LABOR

A proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States giving Congress the right "to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age" will be submitted to the California Legislature this year for ratification.

The proposal, commonly called the child-labor amendment, is one of the most important to be suggested as an addition to or a change in the original form of the Constitution. Included among the interests both supporting and opposing ratification are many whose motives are purely selfish and mercenary. Likewise, among those urging ratification are visionaries and organizations possessing little or no knowledge of the exact purposes and limitations of the measure.

A dispassionate analysis of the amendment will lead to a conclusion that its proponents provided so far as possible, in its preparation and language, for the conservation of the childhood and youth of America and that such an amendment, intelligently and honestly administered, would be calculated to achieve a beneficial result.

There is sufficient latitude in the working of the proposal, however, to permit great injury not only to the immediate generation of boys and girls whose activities may be regulated under it, but to the whole future of the nation. It must, therefore, follow, if the amendment is ratified by the States, that its beneficial influence can only be assured and maintained by able administration and by the watchful attention of an intelligent public.

The disastrous effect of literal enforcement of the provision for prohibiting the labor of "persons under 18 years of age" can be foreseen by considering the experience and personal background of the successful men of today, whether in business, commerce, industry, art, literature or other constructive and important activities. Virtually everyone worked before reaching the age of 18, each made discoveries and laid a foundation in character and energy that has served in all the demands and emergencies of later life. To have prohibited any form of work for these individuals prior to their 18th year would have tended to destroy in them both initiative and enterprise.

Should the child-labor amendment be enacted and fall prey to the demagogue and the political self-seeker endless trouble and confusion will follow and those whom the amendment seeks to protect will be made the chief sufferers under its improper application. Properly administered, an act regulating and limiting and, in certain clearly understood and defined instances, prohibiting, child labor can become a tremendous force in child conservation and development.

Many of the leading authorities on child life in America are opposed to the amendment. These include teachers, members of the bar, churchmen, settlement workers and others directly concerned with the work of protecting the rights and furthering the interests of the nation's boys and girls. A general basis for this opposition rests upon a contention that the amendment would seriously invade the rights of the individual, would transfer parental authority to government and would rest in the Federal government certain prerogatives fundamental to the rights of the States.

This unfavorable view of the amendment and its possible effect was taken by the people of Massachusetts in a recent election, when, by a vote of 696,119 to 347,221, Massachusetts electors declined to approve a measure instructing the Massachusetts Legislature to ratify.

Those opposing ratification argue that every State in the Union possesses adequate legislation to protect boys and girls from exploitation either by parents or by employers. In California the labor of children is prohibited under 15 years of age, except for children of 12 years or more during school vacation periods. None of the forth-eight States permits the labor of children under 14 years of age.

No law, however well-meant, must be permitted to impair the usefulness or stand in the path of the personal efficiency of the individual. It cannot be denied that a very strong sentimental appeal attaches to any proposal to protect children from excessive or unhealthful toil. There is a side of the situation, a side that presents a spectacle of dwarfed physical development and retarded mental development due to unwise or enforced labor in early youth, that must be considered.

Unscrupulous or ignorant persons, whether for gain or through mere personal selfishness, should not be permitted to exploit the childhood of America. Those who urge ratification of the amendment assert that local legislation of the several States has not been adequate to meet abuses which the amendment seeks to eradicate through Federal intervention.

The question is fundamental to our form of government and to our standards of citizenship. The California Legislature, in arriving at a decision either to ratify or to refuse ratification, should consider the question wholly apart from sentimental, selfish or political interests. It is the ultimate good of the child which should be served.

DEADLY MONOXIDE FUMES

So many deaths have occurred in this city of late because of the fumes generated by defective gas heaters in dwelling houses that the health officer is about to propose legislative action by the City Council as a preventive measure. Assuredly this is a step in the right direction. New York City has led the way in the fight against carbon monoxide poisoning and Los Angeles, though enjoying more genial climatic conditions and using heating devices but for short periods during the year, will do well to follow.

Many houses in this city are built with imitation fireplaces, and there are thousands of bungalows that have no chimneys nor vents of any sort for the escape of the fumes generated by the heaters. As only 1 per cent of monoxide gas in the atmosphere of a room is sufficient to cause death, if it is breathed for many minutes, the importance of ventilation for such a room is obvious. A window open only a few inches generally would supply enough fresh air to offset the effects of the poison, but often the room is kept air-tight, which is a dangerous condition under any circumstances.

A general warning has been issued by Claude C. Brown, gas engineer for the State Railroad Commission, not to burn gas heaters in rooms unless there is proper ventilation. He says that the same precaution should be taken with gas ovens. The fumes are odorless and colorless and cannot be detected, which adds to the danger of those who are not very susceptible to what is known as the "closeness" of a room. Many persons, however, feel this condition instinctively upon entering a room or after remaining in it for a little while. These will rarely suffer from gas poisoning, as they will either beat a retreat or open a window. To give good ventilation a window should be open both at the top and bottom.

It is pointed out by a correspondent who evidently is an expert on the subject of gas heating and ventilation that many of the so-called venting devices do not vent. This writer says that the functioning of a vent depends upon many factors, including the movement of the wind. A vent may function at one time and not at another, according to atmospheric conditions. Monoxide poisoning may result from down draughts. One housekeeper reports that the flame in her vented gas heater blew out five times in one windy day. We have very little wind in Los Angeles, even in equinoctial seasons, but always there is a possibility of just such an occurrence as the one reported, and a vent, if employed at all, should be so constructed as not to permit of the extinguishing of the gas flame.

Although chlorine gas generally was used by the contending forces in the World War, monoxide gas was also employed at times and, although it was not so easily handled and was more dangerous to those setting it adrift, it was more deadly in one respect, as a respirator would not protect one exposed to it.

Municipal legislation along the line proposed should help to combat the evil. Meantime the wise householder will see to it that his gas-heated rooms are properly ventilated.

PADDLE YOUR OWN CANOE

It is encouraging to read in the report of the manager of the California Development Association that "the year has been marked by a steady flow of population into California;" that "more than 1000 new industries have been established in the State;" that "taking the State as a whole, bank clearings and building activities have scored new marks," and that "the spirit of unity was brought out strongly" during the year. But none of these statements can fully express the startling advances and bulging prosperity of Southern California.

For instance, the city of Los Angeles alone has absorbed more than 125,000 of the newcomers; has gained 700 of the new industries allotted to the entire State for the year; has taken fourth place in the value of building permits among cities of the United States, having been surpassed only by New York, Chicago and Detroit; has increased individual bank deposits by over $96,000,000 and increased bank clearings by over $207,000,000. The "spirit of unity" referred to has been genuine so far as Southern California is concerned, but we are inclined to doubt the attitude of some folks at the northern end.

William Wrigley, Jr., one of the largest and shrewdest American advertisers, in making a contribution for Southern California publicity, has called attention to our shortcomings in that direction. If we are to depend upon the California Development Association, we will certainly get the core of the apple. In the leading magazines of the country, now and for many months past, will be found full pages handsomely illustrated with views of San Francisco, "the gateway to California," being the advertisement of "Californians, Inc.," and offering a free booklet on "California, Where Life is Better," by applying at the San Francisco address. Politically and otherwise, it has been repeatedly demonstrated that Southern California can depend upon no living soul north of the Tehachepi to speak a good word for us, and it behooves us to take Mr. Wrigley's hint, which he has generously backed with his money.

To refer again to the report of the California Development Association, it makes an apology for the results accruing during the year 1924 which the facts in Southern California by no means warrant. It is stated that "many adverse elements were successfully combated by unity of action and the elimination of them has placed the State in a position for a broad and general advance in 1925." It lacks the punch of past success and of a positive future.

SUPER-IMMORTAL

This is encouraging. We have quite a boneyard full of immortal picture plays, but this is the first which promises to be always immortal.

Many of the immortals have lived only about three weeks. Six weeks of immortality has been considered pretty good. A show immortal enough to run three or four months has been classed as a knockout, or the real Olympian goods. But where are the always-immortals of yesterday? There weren't any. Even the peculiarly gifted wordologist of moviedom have not offered us one before. Their present assurance leads us to the staggering thought that this one may live a whole year.

Just About It
by James J. Montague

PROPHECY IS RISKY

I wrote a very flattering sketch
Of Deacon Jones, then dying;
I managed his good deeds to stretch
By conscientious lying.*
I had hurried into print,
Then patiently I waited
Till I might haply get a hint
That he had been translated.
Alas! the deacon had the laugh,
To my humiliation;
He's still alive, that epitaph
Was not for publication.

I wrote a lovely Winter lay;
Said poem's subject matter
Describing the cold clammy way
The whirling snowflakes patter.
I laid aside the little song
That readers might peruse it.
"When January comes along,"
Said I, "I'm sure to use it."
But January's lovely skies
To date are azure tinted
And I began to realise

I wrote about a candidate,
I thought would be elected;
I said that he was wise and great
And very much respected.
I said that he was strong and brave
And with extreme elation
I crowed about the way he'd save
A wrecked and fallen nation.
But when the people went to vote
By golly! how they licked him,
And that nice little boost I wrote

MEMORIES

The 'cellos' plaintive moan,
Recall dear olden days that live
In memory alone.

The heart turns fondly to those scenes
Limned with a golden hue.
And yet—I would not wish them back—
Not even, dear, with you!

The bliss we seek to find
Lies ever just around the curve.
Its shadows lie behind.

Common Sense

SUNSET

BY ELLANORE J. PARKER

This is the street of the Setting Sun. Upon its broad [illegible] bears the thousands of motors that pass to and fro between the City and the city of Movieland.

The big red cars move quickly upon this wide boulevard—time is the essence of their life, to hasten men and women on their mission. Nobly the majesty of the hills of Hollywood rise, but to their beauty the seeker of fame gives no heed; eager panting crowds they come, young and old, the godly and the ungodly, drawn by the magic of the films. Lovely young girls with eager lips half parted seek from the big red car window, the sign, "Hollywood." And following close upon their footsteps, the eager boy.

Seeking, questing, planning, the wheels of the red car bear them forward. Life is a racing torrent within their veins. Youth, the gift of the gods, so little prized until it has gone, sees only success in their venture.

The runaway daughter plans, with little pangs of remorse for her desertion, to buy a Hollywood house for mother and dad when she is on the silversheet. The streets seem full of promise to her young heart. The tiny mirror tells her she has beauty, and it is the key of the door she seeks to unlock. It is the key to the magic door of filmland, and she has no doubts of her ability to turn it.

Dreams, dreams! All the streets of Hollywood are strewn with them. The air is full of their vibrant messages. If sobs and despair are there, too, the dreamer hears them not.

Oh, how often the car stops, how impatient the eager traveler gets on the Street of the Setting Sun. On the front of the big red car is printed the word they love, "Hollywood," and no mountain of untold grandeur or sky of lovely hues is half as potent to stir their hearts. Poor children of a glittering age, how shall we blame you, fed upon the husks of life from the hour of your birth, nature calls in vain to your hectic brain.

The Street of the Setting Sun sees two streams of humanity, ever coming, ever going, and as the big cars return, or the swift motor cars pass, there is tragedy in the returning, life has changed, the sun shines, but no warmth touches the cold heart. How cruel a monster is hidden in this fair paradise called "Movieland." Its appetite is so fickle, its need is never filled, yet the daintiest is turned away. "I came but to find the key would not turn for me."

All up and down the highway the high hopes and the broken hearts lie, and only the brave return and find their own, turning them with good labor to excellent account, for at the other end of the rainbow is a pot of gold. In the big city of the Angels opportunity sits at every corner, she is a willing comrade for every seeker. "Come," she says, "I will show you a door, not glittering perhaps, but it will open to your knocking. It needs no magic key, no golden stairs for you to climb, but step by step with brave and loyal heart you will ascend the good ladder of achievement and reach the top."

Little girl with your flowerlike beauty or brave and handsome boy, come back to the Sunset Street and pick up your dreams. They can all come true. Not on the flickering sheet, but on the good fabric of everyday life. Here in this sunny land, fate weaves her magic carpet for you. Come back and see how fine it is, the lovely hills, the pepper trees are yours, all the glory of the restless sea is yours, and in the churches the seats are yours. There is so much for you to take. Open your hands and reach out for the beauty of nature, and she will add many things to your store.

If fate has kindly turned for you the magic key to the coveted land, keep bright your young enthusiasm, for as you give so you receive, and as you pass along the Highway of the Setting Sun halt for a moment and stretch out a friendly hand.

I WAS THINKIN'

By The Foothill Philosopher

It is significant that truly scientific men have abandoned the unscientific habit of disregarding, ignoring and sometimes even denying that for which there is apparently no cause nor explanation.

It has always been the great and commendable business of science to examine and, whenever possible, explain and manipulate phenomena. Formerly (and even today) some scientists tried to account for, if not to explain, the entire universe and its apparent laws on a material basis.

When occultism and mysticism challenged the materialists to account for thought, memory and emotions on a materialistic basis, materialism trembled for its life but finally, with a pride, courage and intellectual effort which did it credit, material science marshaled forth a fairly acceptable array of evidence to prove that thoughts are only forms, memory the recognition of impressions and emotions but the reactions of impressions.

However, when faced with the fact of consciousness and of revelations which confuse, reverse or destroy all calculating faculties and all relative knowledge, rationalism stands defeated and dumb.

St. Paul was a good logician, but he had no word of argument for the great Light which first blinded him and then revealed to him those spiritual truths which made him one of the greatest advocates of the new gospel. Also, it is worthy of note that Paul was strongest in those writings in which he least employed his logical powers. Paul himself seems to have recognized this fact, and to have realized that there is "that something" which is beyond the power of words to tell or explain, as evidenced by his sublime summary: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels . . . and have not love, I am become as sounding brass."

The reason the road to ruin is always in excellent condition is because it is continually being resurfaced with good intentions.

WARRANT IN LIQUOR CASE FOR PACKER

President of Long Beach Concern Fails to Appear When Trial Date is Set

A bench warrant for the arrest of Alexander B. Stewart, president of the Curtis Packing Corporation of Long Beach, was issued by Federal Judge McCormick yesterday when Stewart and twelve others charged with conspiracy to violate the Volstead Act failed to appear in court when the case was called for setting. The trial was set for the 30th inst. None of the defendants was represented by counsel when the case was called.

The original indictment against Stewart and codefendants named eighteen persons who were arrested on March 25, 1923, when Long Beach police and Federal prohibition agents confiscated a fishing boat, two trucks, four automobiles and 166 cases of liquor. The officers reported Stewart was driving away with a large quantity of liquor when they arrested him near the wharf where the fishing boats and most of the seized liquor were found.

A new indictment returned last summer named only thirteen defendants. Besides Stewart, they are Victor C. Lord, general manager of the packing corporation; Albert C. Leahy, sales manager of the company; Jack Miller, Claude V. Dudrey, Oscar Lund, Larry Talbot, Lewis E. Dudrey, W. E. Knowlton, Maurice De Leon, K. Nagai, Frank Kobota and George Cheney.

MISSING TOURISTS HUNTED

Couple With Two Children on Way Here from Texas Lost Since December 7; Search for Man

Deputy sheriffs yesterday began a search for Mr. and Mrs. Leo S. Listen of San Antonio, Tex., and their two small children, who vanished while en route from San Antonio to Los Angeles in an automobile.

Their disappearance was reported to the Sheriff's office by D. D. Dooley of Bell Station, a brother of Mrs. Listen. He stated that his sister, her husband and their two children left their home on December 27, last, to come here, but that since their departure he had not heard a word from them.

Search was also being conducted by the Sheriff's office for G. F. Heil, 55 years of age, of 762 Melwin avenue, Watts. He left his rooming-house at the above address on New Year's Eve, saying that he was going to Redondo to celebrate the arrival of the infant year. Since then he has not been heard from.

Man Who Fled Road Camp May Land in Prison

Whether C. V. "Curley" Clark has maneuvered himself out of the county road camp and into San Quentin prison will be decided in an immediate appeal to the Supreme Court, it was said yesterday after a hearing in which Judge Reeve remanded Clark to custody for sentence.

Clark got a suspended sentence from Judge Preston on condition he serve time at road work. He escaped from the road gang and was recaptured. The Second District Court of Appeal held Clark should either have been sent to prison or set free and that his incarceration in the road camp was illegal. Judge Reeve accordingly set aside Judge Preston's action and sent Clark back to jail. Attorneys W. W. Judd and J. A. Balthasar, who appeared for Clark, said they would bring habeas corpus proceedings at once as a test of the court's action.

A charge of aiding a prisoner to escape made against Louis M. Dischner was dismissed by Judge Reeve as a result of the Court of Appeal decision.

Pioneer Oil Man Will be Laid at Rest Tomorrow

Funeral services for David E. Martin, pioneer California oil operator and father-in-law of Nick Harris, head of the private detective agency of that name, will be conducted at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the Church of the Flowers. Burial will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Mr. Martin was 68 years of age. He suffered a stroke of paralysis while eating Christmas dinner at his home at 448 South Occidental Boulevard and died yesterday. Mr. Martin came to Los Angeles from Pennsylvania in 1885 and for years was associated with E. L. Doheny and Charles A. Canfield in the development of local oil fields.

It was partially through his efforts that the Taft and McKittrick fields were opened. Later he was associated with the Union and Central oil companies. He leaves a widow, Mary Martin, two daughters, Mrs. Goldie Buttrick and Mrs. Nick Harris, and one son, Sheridan H. Martin, also an oil operator.

VICTIM OF ATTACKERS BACK HOME

Blow Renders Salesman Unconscious; Wakes Up Near Bakersfield

A ride from Maywood nearly to Bakersfield was taken by Thomas G. Munson, a real estate salesman, while he was unconscious, according to a report made yesterday to the Sheriff's office. Last Friday, according to Munson's story, he gave two sailors a lift in his car, picking them up at Bell. At Maywood he stopped his car to let a train pass and was knocked out by a blow on the head. When he awoke he was alone in the back seat of the car, one tire was flat and the gasoline was all gone.

Munson got a ride into Bakersfield, received medical attention and obtained gasoline, and drove his car back to his home in Tujunga. He will have an X-ray taken to determine if his skull is fractured, he said.

City Engineer's Fund Request is Given Approval

City Engineer Van Norman's request for $200,000 to carry on the reorganization work of his office will be recommended favorably by the Finance Committee of the City Council today. Of this total, $137,000 already is in the engineer's fund to provide for additional employment.

Among the items provided for in the total asked is a public information bureau where the public may readily obtain information regarding work of the engineer's office. This office will be housed in the southern annex to the City Hall and will cost to install approximately $45,000.

Limited Train is Christened on First Trip

With a pint of mineral water bespattered over the coupling of the observation car, the Santa Fe Railway's new California Limited left Los Angeles yesterday morning on her maiden trip to the storm-swept stretches of the Middle West.

The schedule of the Limited has not been changed, but the entire train has been replaced by new equipment, including many innovations for the comfort of travelers, at a cost of approximately $4,000,000.

The ceremony which sped the train on its maiden trip was brief. Miss Florence Strong of the auditing department of the railway daintily broke a pint of mineral water on the observation car, while a number of officials looked on, a bell clanged, and the expensive new limited slowly chugged out of the station.

Council Asked for Opinion on Deal Near Fifth Street

The City Council yesterday referred to City Attorney Stephens for an opinion as to the legality of the city's leasing for forty years to Dr. Hamilton Forline a seventeen-foot strip of land 600 feet in length lying between the old and new Fifth streets from Grand avenue to Flower street. Dr. Forline proposes, if granted the lease, to spend $350,000 in constructing business buildings on the site, and he said that over the forty-year period the city will save $750,000 in the expense of developing the property. Several members of the Council are opposed to leasing the land and believe that it should be developed as a park facing the new public library building.

BIDS OPENED FOR SOUTH PARK PAVING

The Board of Public Works yesterday opened bids for the paving with concrete of South Park avenue from Slauson avenue to Manchester avenue. There were six bidders and the low bid was that of Wells & Bressler, who offered to do the work for $125,774.75. The low bid was 30 per cent lower than the City Engineer's estimate of the cost of the work. The bids were referred to the City Engineer for analysis and recommendation. Bids were also opened for the improvement of twenty-five other streets in various parts of the city.

How Pacific's Air Circulation System Cuts Your Gas Heating Bill 25%

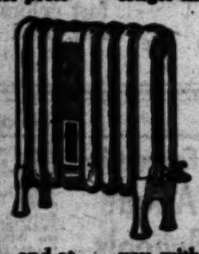
SAVES MONEY AND LASTS LONGER

These mechanical features insure that you get greater heat—quicker—and at lower cost in Pacific Gas Radiators. The 25% saving in fuel soon pays for the slight difference in cost. And because of the sturdy construction, Pacific Gas Radiators last years longer than lighter types.



GAS HEATING AT ALL PRICES

FREE A Pacific Heating Engineer will gladly investigate and recommend the best type of heating for you, without charge. Phone—call at display rooms—or write for free catalogs.

THE LAST WORD

BY ALICE WHITE

ADOPTED

"No, I can't go. Mother is mad at me because I left my cap on the kitchen table."

Charles looked utterly woe-begone. He always seemed to be doing something that demanded discipline. Now, just because of that pesky cap incident, he was not to be allowed to accept an invitation to a picnic.

"Does your mother get mad about things like that" asked Charles wistfully.

"I'll say she doesn't," snorted Colin. "Gee, what is the matter with your mother, anyway? Does she expect you to be an angel?"

So then we learned that Charles was 14 years old and that he had been adopted from an orphan asylum when he was three. This couple had been married for nine years before that and had no children of their own. They were very much impressed with their righteousness in adopting a homeless babe. They were ardent church people, owned their own five-room bungalow, and the husband was a bookkeeper of long standing with his firm. In fact, they were essentially "respectable."

But they also held the sternest possible views about the upbringing of children and the conduct to be expected and demanded from an adopted orphan. Charles was reminded of this daily. One of the oft-spoken remarks that greeted his young ears was: "After all we have done for you. . ."

It seemed painfully easy for Charles to offend. He could not go out to play this evening because his tone of voice was not polite when he came home from school. He must go to bed at 7 o'clock tonight because he had failed to wipe his boots properly. He could not go down to the park for a month because he had returned fifteen minutes after the prescribed time last Saturday. He must forego his quarter-a-week pocket money for two weeks because he had torn his new suit. He must write the Twenty-first psalm out in good clear handwriting ten times because he had not answered directly he was called.

But Charles's most serious woe was that he was always suspected of "lieing" and stealing." If "mother" left a dime on the kitchen windowsill over the sink which disappeared, Charles was always accused. Once it so happened that "father" had used that dime—but no apology to Charles was forthcoming. In any controversy Charles' veracity was always doubted. But even when Charles was able to prove himself truthful no amend was ever made.

All the children in the neighborhood were both sorry for and contemptuous toward Charles. With the frankness of youth they usually said exactly what they thought about Charles' "parents." Sometimes Charles would conscientiously try to defend them and would stupidly echo: "After all they have done for me."

But what are they doing for Charles?

One thing they will surely do if they keep up this harsh discipline, if they keep up this suspicious attitude, is to make that boy into a sneak and a coward. One thing they are surely doing—taking every bit of joy of childhood out of that boy's life.

When I first knew Charles he had all the makings of a thoroughly nice normal boy in him. Treated as a normal boy, allowed the privileges and mild faultinesses of a normal boy, loved and forgiven and trusted like a normal boy, Charles could have been the joy and pride of that couple's life.

And yet these are "good" people. They are doubtless acting from the most ardent sense of duty. They are feeding him well, clothing him well—and, even, lights, training him. Yet every neighborhood neighborhood [illegible] There isn't anything about it.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Change the Atmosphere

Don't expect to boil cauliflower, cabbage, onions, etc., and make an odorless job of it without some ventilation in the kitchen. Have the window down at the top and up at the bottom a couple of inches to create circulation.

Buy the Crumbs

Did you ever ask the proprietor of your delicatessen store if he had any crumbs from cuttings of cheese for sale? You can get enough for 10 cents to make your casserole of maccaroni and cheese, and the crumbs are more or less dried out and in consequence bake better.

Home Privileges

If the child is interested in the home and old enough to appreciate responsibility, it is well to permit her to arrange the flowers for the house. It develops interest in nature and love of the artistic.

A Gain of Fifteen Minutes

If in a hurry to get the baked potatoes done, wash and boil them for about fifteen minutes. Drain and place in the already heated oven. In about ten minutes they will be ready to serve, and lovely and tender in the bargain.

Appetizing Touches

In some homes garnishes on meats and vegetables are things unheard of. Yet these little added touches are just the things to make the hotel dinner seem so dainty and attractive. Watercress, chopped parsley, shredded lettuce, slices of peppers, none of them expensive, but all of them mighty pretty garnishes.

PLAYDOM

"DARK SWAN" CONVENTIONAL BUT INTERESTING

By Edwin Schallert

Apparently these are the red-letter days for squabbles between sisters over the same handsome Romeo—at any rate, on the screen. For even as this rivalry gives pathetic impulse to the plot of "Smouldering Fires," reviewed yesterday in The Times, so does it in a lighter way afford a certain zest in "The Dark Swan."

I don't know how well you'll like the story of this production which is showing at Grauman's Rialto Theater, because in some aspects it is quite conventionally that of the frivolous wife and the neglected husband — but the direction is worth consideration. Millard Webb, it is, who was responsible for this, and he seems to be making great headway for a newcomer in the ranks of the bosses (sic) of the set.

Marie Prevost, Monte Blue and Helene Chadwick are the principal players in this semiflapper show and, though Miss Prevost's name is mentioned first and she merits especial bouquets for her performance, she is far from being the heroine. As a fact, her role is distinctly vampish. She is the selfish foster sister of Miss Chadwick and steals her fiance. Not only steals him, but, by way of being thorough about it, marries him.

The problem that is presented, if problem it might be called, pertains to the masculine incapacity for recognizing true worth in girls. I don't know that all men are thus lacking in such penetration, but a few of the rather highly conventionalized type of the hero might be. It looks fairly acceptable on the screen, anyway.

The complications in the plot multiply when the flapper wife of the hero refuses to settle down after the ring is placed on her finger. All her life she has exhibited a predilection for telling fibs about where she is going when invited out for the evening, and she keeps this up even after the wedding ceremony. Eventually, of course, there is a break-up and then, quite according to expectations, the hero decides that he made a mistake in not picking the other girl in the first place.

The way the plot works out is really not so consequential as some of the touches and treatment (always dependable apparently this season in making pictures seem better than they are,) and the performances of Miss Prevost, Mr. Blue and Miss Chadwick. Some of Monte's comedy is the of the very best he has yet offered, and Miss Chadwick weeps her way very effectively through her role. Miss Prevost does a flip character more than fetchingly. John Patrick adds to the fun, while Lilyan Tashman, Vera Lewis, Carl Miller, Mary MacLaren and Arthur Rankin all may be noted, especially Miss Tashman and Miss Lewis.

THREE PLAYERS WILL APPEAR AT CRITERION

The final week of Dante's "Inferno" before the opening of "He Who Gets Slapped," Saturday at the Criterion Theater is to be one of the special features.

Tonight the added attraction will be the personal appearance of Virginia Davis, the 5-year-old child star, who appears in the comedy, "Alice in Wonderland," at the Criterion. She is a finished performer and she will dance and sing. Tomorrow night Bob Klein, wizard of the make-up, and demon of the "Inferno," will appear and show how those of the screen change their appearance for each part, and Thursday night William Scott, the young lover of "Inferno," and a former vaudeville star, will appear in an act written especially for him.

PASADENANS HOLD "KEMPY"

"Kempy," the comedy by the Nugents, of vaudeville fame, has caught on in Pasadena, and is now in its second week in the Community Playhouse. The cast is headed by Bertram Hancock, with Ralph Hilliar, George Reis, Earl Eby, Virginia Scott, Donna Vickroy, Ines Johnson and Virginia Wightman among the other members.

A RAPID THINKER

One day a new patient, a pale-faced, portly man, came to him for advice.

"Ah," said the medico, "you lead altogether too sedentary a life. What you need is physical exercise. Your occupation, I can see at a glance, is one that calls for a minimum of muscular exertion."

"I don't know about that," replied the man. "I am a coal-heaver. I handle on an average about five tons of coal every working day all the year round—week in and week out!"

"Ah-h!" And the doctor frowned. Then he pulled himself together and said smoothly:

2700-FOOT CABLE

A submarine cable in one continuous length of 2700 feet has been laid across the Hudson River at Garrison, just below West Point, according to the Electrical World. The make-up of the cable and the method of laying it presented some features not encountered in everyday practice. The cable is to carry current from the east side of the river to the west side for local distribution in the immediate vicinity of Garrison. Power is to be transmitted at first at 2300 volts with ungrounded star-connected transformers, and this will later be changed to 4000 volts with the neutral grounded.

TIPS TO THE PLAYGOERS

"Smouldering Fires"—(Forum:) One of the best of Clarence Brown's productions, and offering a fine opportunity for Pauline Frederick. Still, no up to advance claims.

"Just Married" — (Majestic:) Bedroom farce that moves very rapidly.

"Dark Swan"—(Rialto:) Conventional story treated intelligently.

"Greatest Love of All" — (Loew's:) George Beban scores on both screen and stage in same play. Interesting novelty.

"This Woman" — (Mission:) Irene Rich at her best, and Marc McDermott even better.

"Peter Pan" — (Million Dollar:) A fantasy to delight both child and grown up. Second week.

Dante's "Inferno" — (Criterion:) This town has been going straight to it for four weeks. Now for a fifth.

"Husbands and Lovers" — (Alhambra:) Domestic drama and a little comedy, dished as John M. Stahl knows how to dish it.

LITERATURE PAYS MORE

Few Writers of Past Received Enough for Their Labor

There can be no doubt that, with the tremendous increase of the English-speaking community, on both sides of the Atlantic, the rewards of literature are today higher than they have ever been in the past. It may be safely inferred that if Dickens were writing "best sellers" today, and had the vogue he enjoyed after the entry of Sam Weller into "Pickwick" until the last hour of his life, he would be a millionaire.

But even in an earlier day there were at least isolated instances of the same sort of thing. President Grant, the man, who, next to Lincoln, was responsible for saving the union, when seized with an incurable disease, sat up in bed and heroically penned his memoirs, so that his wife and family should be well provided for. He got $350,000 for that deathbed book.

In his failing years, and often in great pain, Sir Walter Scott set himself the task of paying off his publishers' liabilities of £130,000 He succeeded, but killed himself in the effort. A similar disaster overtook Mark Twain. He set off for a lecturing and writing tour around the world and paid off thereby a "debt of honor" of $500,000. It is stated that the total earnings of his golden pen were five times that amount.

It is on record that Lord Macaulay got £20,000 for his "History of England." Moreover, despite this big price, it proved a splendid bargain for his publishers, for the public demand was so great that the press could not keep pace with it. Gibbon, on the other hand, got only half as much for a much bigger work, a work which occupied twenty-five laborious years to complete.

There is a sad reverse side to this picture of big book profits. Dr. Johnson got no more than £1575 for seven years of slavery in the compilation of his epoch-making dictionary, and at the time it was a record price. Goldsmith got £60 for his masterpiece, "The Vicar of Wakefield," about £20 for his fine poem, "The Traveler," and 5 guineas for a laborious English grammar. Poe had to be content with $10 for "The Raven," and Milton's reward for "Paradise Lost," first and last, did not exceed £20.—[Vancouver Province.

WORLD'S WORST TRAIN

French Writer Says It Runs Between Constantinople and Angora

For thirty hours we have been bumped together in the collection of ancient and decrepit cars that forms the famous train de luxe from Constantinople to Angora, the sole link uniting ancient and modern Turkey.

A delightful journey! No sleeping accommodations, no dining car, no conveniences of any kind. Seated on dirty, uncomfortable benches on which we are forbidden to lie down, stifled by the heat and assaulted by vermin, our sole preoccupation during the trip has been to find at every stop a little fresh water, even if undrinkable.

Between Constantinople and Angora there is but a single eating station, at Eskishehr, a place of unhappy memory. Suspicious soup, high meat, squash swimming in a black mutton-tallow gravy and bitter beer! Even the douzico (champagne) was abominable. It smelled of denatured alcohol and puckered the lips. During the rest of the trip I lived on the country; sour milk mixed with water and green fruit.

My traveling companions tried to comfort me by describing how in a few weeks everything would be changed for the better; the government was about to put on sleeping cars and a dining car with all European luxuries. But for the time being, at least, these things still remained in the land of dreams, and frequent inspections by prying gendarmes were no compensation for their absence.

A year ago, when I traveled by rail from Riga to Moscow, I supposed I had reached the limit of train discomfort, and I said something to that effect in my letters home. Let me apologize to the Bolsheviki for those unkind reflections. There is something worse than the train from Riga to Moscow. It is the present train from Constantinople to Angora. We travel to learn.—[Paul Berthelet in L'Eco de Paris.

BRED IN THE BONE

Bishop Bristol said at a Methodist convention in Chattanooga:

"The Communists and the Bolsheviks want to do away with patriotism, but their task is a hard one, for patriotism with most of us is bred in the bone.

"John Wesley, the founder of our sect, is a good example of patriotism. He thundered one day from his pulpit:

"'We English are great sinners. Yea, we are miserable worms. We have abused our blessings and a dreadful punishment awaits us for our innumerable misdeeds. Yet, for all that —'

"'But we are the best people in the world for all that!' he shouted."—[Exchange.

TROUBLE BOTH WAYS

An Australian barrister tells of a black fellow charged in a country town with stealing. His solicitor decided to put him in the box to give evidence on his own behalf. The magistrate, being doubtful if he understood the nature of an oath, undertook to examine him on the point.

"Jacky," he said, "you know what will happen to you if you tell a lie?"

"My oath, boss," replied Jacky, "me go down below—burn long time."

"Quite right," replied the magistrate. "And now you know what will happen if you tell the truth?"

"Yes, boss. We lose 'em case."—[Sydney Herald.

BEBAN ON STAGE, SCREEN AT LOEW'S

"Greatest Love of All" is Interesting Feature of the Week

BY KENNETH TAYLOR

Whether it is the stage or screen work of George Beban that appeals most strongly to theatergoers, the actor's current visit here is proving very successful. He appears in both mediums at Loew's this week in "The Greatest Love of All," which is told on the screen for the most part, but which is interrupted in the middle for a courtroom scene with the actors present in flesh and blood.

Beban again characterizes the lovable Italian he has made so familiar. The story, too, is of a familiar type, although there are unlooked-for developments which continually refreshen the interest. It starts off at a brisk clip and continues in a direct vein throughout the story. Beban wrote and directed the picture.

The crowning scene for the actor-producer-writer is that courtroom injection, with the poor but honest immigrant defending his mother's integrity in the face of many adverse complications. The lines themselves are not eloquent but Beban endows them with a warmth of spirit which makes them ring remarkably true for the time being, and it is with difficulty that the photoplay version of the story is resumed. Audiences do not forget, either, and "The End" is greeted with a wild burst of applause that does not subside until the actor has made a little speech.

While few of the names in the cast are especially well known here, practically every member is capable of fine work, and most of them are accommodating in this respect. Mary Skurkey as Trina, the girl next door who loves Beban, pleases in all of her scenes, and Marie Di Benedetta as the mother displays a rather fine feeling of restraint throughout the picture. O. Zangrilli as the girl's father is another who succeeds in maintaining his share of the interest.

Others in the cast are J. W. Johnston, very good in some of his scenes as the District Attorney, Wanda Lyon, Baby Evelyn, Nettie Belle Darby, William Hewatt, John K. Newman, Robert M. Doll and George Humphrey.

A Jack White comedy, "Rough and Ready," and Lipschultz's Orchestra and overture, are other attractions on the program.

McDERMOTT SHINES IN MISSION SHOW

"This Woman" may mean Irene Rich before you see it, but it is apt to be remembered by the performance of Marc McDermott. And that is not casting a shadow over Miss Rich's ability as an actress, either, for she does some of her best work to date in this story by Howard Rockey now showing at the Mission Theater.

It is just that McDermott was handed a role that was probably the most human of the lot in the first place, and has succeeded in keeping it so in the screen transcription.

The heroine, on the other hand, is so appealingly sweet and eternally good that one never loses sight of the fact that she is the heroine.

McDermott you cannot place until the last scene or two. One moment he seems to have villainish tendencies, and the next, only the noblest of feelings. That brings the character home to us, for it is the way people conduct themselves in real life. His work has that suave touch that characterizes Adolphe Menjou's performances, but it is not of the same type.

There are other well-known players in the cast who acquit themselves with credit. Among them are Creighton Hale and Clara Bow, especially good in their scenes, and Ricardo Cortez and Louise Fazenda. So many and so good are they, in fact, that one regrets a little that the footage is such as to prohibit a more generous display of their histrionic powers.

There are trite and common situations in "This Woman," to be sure—many of them in the earlier portion of the story—but there are also novelties that will possibly prove wholly unexpected. One of these is the selection of a husband the girl makes in the end. This would be a surprise no matter which man she chose, but the way it works out is the greater surprise of the two.

Phil Rosen is responsible for the direction. There is nothing particularly characteristic about this except that he seems to have done a good all-around job. On the whole you will probably enjoy this picture. It is better than anything the Mission has shown in several weeks.

REMARKABLE STORY

Back in 1882 M. C. Miller earned his first dollar. He cut his initials on the cartwheel before spending it at a circus. Thirteen years later while working as a street car conductor, the same dollar returned to him as carfare. He substituted another dollar for it and kept the old coin until he lost it. Miller now runs a filling station at Miami, Fla. The other day a man wanted some "gas." In the money he paid Miller for it was the marked dollar. It had come back the second time.—[Capper's Weekly.

One out of every 1600 motor cars in use in the United States at the present time is the property of the Bell Telephone System. More than 9000 motor vehicles are in use throughout the system and all but a very few carry telephone tools and materials in specially adapted bodies.

RAIL VALUATION FIGHT IN COURT

Three Federal Judges Hear Salt Lake Line Case

Action Brought to Annul Commission Ruling

Company Says Road Worth More Than $45,000,000

Hearing on a suit filed in the United States District Court by the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad in December, 1923, to have the government enjoined from enforcing a valuation order, and to have annulled a valuation of $45,000,000 placed on the plaintiff's properties was begun yesterday before Erskine R. Ross, judge of the United States District Court of Appeals, and Benjamin F. Bledsee and Paul J. McCormick, judges of the District Court. Blackburn Esterline, assistant to the Solicitor-General at Washington, is conducting the government's case.

The suit was filed against the government. Later the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Western Union Telegraph Company intervened as defendants. The telegraph company's interest is in having the valuation order of the Interstate Commerce Commission stand in so far as it places ownership of property used jointly by it and the railroad on a 50-50 basis. The railroad on the other hand contends that it should be credited with the ownership of two-thirds of such property, and the telegraph company with one-third.

QUESTION JURISDICTION

Three judges are hearing the case under a provision of the Valuation Act of 1913. A motion that the case be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction was made yesterday by Attorney Esterline on the grounds that the court is being asked to consider new evidence that was not available to the Interstate Commerce Commission when it fixed the value of the railroad properties. The matter before the court should remain within the jurisdiction of the commission, he held. The court announced a ruling on the motion would be made later and that, to save time, the case would be taken up for trial pending the ruling.

The railroad originally claimed its properties had been undervalued $25,000,000. An equitable valuation, it said, would be $80,000,000. In subsequent amendments to the bill of compaint, it claimed a valuation of $70,000,000 for its properties.

UNIQUE ACTION

This suit is the only one filed in the United States to enjoin establishment of a final valuation made by the Interstate Commerce Commission under provisions of the La Follette bill passed in March, 1913, according to Attorney Esterline. A ruling of the United States Supreme Court is expected soon in an action brought by the Delaware and Hudson Railroad to annul a tentative valuation fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Prior to passage of the La Follette bill, the valuation of railroad properties was fixed in individual rate-making cases arising before United States district courts. The new law made it a duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix the value of all railroad properties, both carrier and noncarrier, in the United States. Not all railroad properties have as yet been revalued.

FIX FINAL VALUE

In fixing the final value of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad, the Interstate Commerce Commission reported on June 7, 1923. The valuation of $45,000,000 was made as of June 30, 1914.

Attorney Esterline and J. Edwin Simpson, assistant United States Attorney, are representing the government in the case now on trial. P. J. Farrell and Edward M. Reidy of Washington, represent the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Ralph H. Kimball and Francis R. Stark of New York, the Western Union Telegraph Company. A. S. Halsted and Fred E. Pettit of Los Angeles, H. A. Scandrett, valuation and commerce counsel of the Union Pacific, and J. M. Souby, also counsel for the Union Pacific, both of Omaha, are representing the Salt Lake Railroad.

HOLLYWOOD MAN FOR PLANNING COMMISSION

CARL BUSH IS SUCCESSOR OF COUNCILMAN ALLAN; ONE OTHER NAMED

Carl Bush, secretary of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed a member of the Los Angeles County Regional Planning Commission, it was announced yesterday, succeeding Councilman Robert M. Allan, whose term expired in December. The announcement was made by Hugh R. Pomeroy, secretary of the commission. Mr. Pomeroy's term also expired December 31, 1924, and his place will be filled by R. Q. Baldwin, representing the Fourth Supervisorial District.

The next meeting of the commission is to be held Friday, the 9th inst., at the Hall of Records Building. Both new and old members are expected to attend.

CITY OFFICIAL RESIGNS

W. Perry Thomas, for the past several years a Deputy City Attorney, has resigned to join the Victor Girard real-estate organization. His resignation took effect yesterday. City Attorney Stephens has not announced who is to be appointed as Mr. Thomas's successor.

LIST OF FIVE IS APPROVED BY COUNCIL

Two Other Appointments of Mayor, Clogston and Shaw, Go to Committee

The City Council yesterday confirmed five appointments to commissions made by Mayor Cryer and sent to committees for investigation two appointments, to succeed commissioners whose terms had expired. Those confirmed were Hugh J. McGuire, Board of Public Works; Mrs. Charles H. Richmond, Social Service Commission; F. H. Pettingell, board of library directors; Mrs. Cecil B. De Mille, Municipal Art Commission, and Dr. John R. Haynes, Board of Public Service Commissioners. Councilman Mushet voted against the confirmation of Dr. Haynes.

The appointments to be investigated by the Council are Bert L. Clogston, to succeed Mrs. Martha Nelson McCann as a member of the Park Commission, and of Maj. John C. Shaw as a member of the Board of Public Utilities to succeed Walter R. Leeds. Clogston has long been a political supporter of the Mayor, and is a real estate dealer.

Clogston was an unsuccessful candidate for the Board of Education at the 1923 primary election, and was seventeenth in the field of twenty candidates.

Maj. Shaw was acting harbor engineer following the dismissal of J. W. Ludlow by Harbor Commissioners Kibele and Allen. Later Ludlow was restored to his position, Shaw became assistant harbor engineer, and finally both he and Ludlow resigned. Shaw now is chief engineer for the McClintic-Marshall Engineering Company.

PROFESSOR TO TALK TO LOCAL CHEMISTS

An illustrated lecture will be given tomorrow evening before the local section of the American Chemical Society by Prof. W. V. Cruess, expert in fruit products at the University of California Agricultural College. The meeting will be conducted at the Mary Louise Cafe, 2200 West Seventh street, and will follow a banquet in honor of Prof. Cruess, who has just returned from a trip to Europe. He will discuss "Olive and Citrus Products in Southern Europe." The public is invited to the lecture.

LONG BEACH FRAUD CASE CONTINUED

Rabe's Attorney Asks for Time to Locate Important Witnesses

Trial of Paul B. Rabe, indicted by the county grand jury for asserted obtaining of money by false pretenses in connection with the promotion of the Long Beach Dock and Terminal Company, was continued yesterday by Judge Keetch to March 2 at the request of counsel for Rabe.

Rabe, according to the indictment, used the names of City Manager Windham of Long Beach, Congressman Lineberger, Senator Shortridge and other prominent officials in attempting to sell preorganization stock in the harbor project.

Henry C. Huntington, attorney for Rabe, asked the delay as he had been unable to locate certain witnesses, whose testimony, he said, was essential to the defense.

Bench warrants were issued for two witnesses for the State who failed to appear yesterday but were later withdrawn when doubt arose as to whether they had been properly subpoenaed.

Man Accused in Heart Balm Suit Denies Charges

Denying he caused an estrangement between John Nelson and his wife, Elinor Nelson, Lawrence F. Arnold yesterday filed an answer to the suit for $50,000 damages brought against him by Nelson for asserted alienation of affections.

Arnold asserted the couple were estranged long before he became acquainted with Mrs. Nelson, and he asserted she had no affection for her husband.

Nelson asserted in his complaint that he married his wife July 23, 1919, and lived happily with her until the defendant was said to have entered their lives and to have schemed and plotted to gain Mrs. Nelson's affections. Nelson declared Arnold induced his wife to go to Reno, where she was said to have filed suit for divorce. The wife was said to have been persuaded to remain in the Nevada city by gifts of money, automobiles and other property asserted to have been furnished her by Arnold.

Arnold also set up the defense that Nelson and his wife separated because of the husband's asserted cruelty.

ANOTHER DEATH CAUSED BY GAS

Fatality List from Fumes Now Numbers Seventeen

Gardener is Latest Victim; Narrow Escape for Two

Officials to Meet Today to Combat Monoxide Peril

Deadly carbon monoxide fumes yesterday claimed the life of another victim, bringing the toll of dead from this source to seventeen, and overcame two other persons.

The death of the seventeenth victim, W. H. Neal, 52 years of age, a gardener at the home of A. K. Detweiler, 2141 West Adams street, was reported as city and county authorities began a study of means to check the "sleeping death."

The gardener was found in his room above the Detweiler garage, where he made his home, by Edmond Slaig, a chauffeur for the Detweiler family. The latter had noted the absence of the gardener since Saturday and instituted a search yesterday. He found the room in which the gardener lived locked and broke through the door to discover Neal dead on the floor with the gas heater going full blast. The windows of the room were down. The body of the gardener was removed to the Robert Sharp mortuary. Neal had lived alone in one of the upper rooms of the garage for some years.

TWO HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. and Mrs. I. Komoroff of 6060 Lennox avenue, Lennox, experienced a narrow and dramatic escape from death from the deadly fumes in their home.

Mrs. Komoroff awakened about 4:30 a.m. and lighted a gas stove, and went back to bed. About 6:30 a.m. she awakened in a daze and realized that she was being overcome by gas. On the floor beside her bed she saw the motionless body of her husband.

By superhuman efforts she dragged herself to a window which she succeeded in opening partly before she became unconscious. Several hours passed before she partially regained consciousness, and attracted the attention of neighbors.

BABY UNHARMED

Dr. C. A. Robinson of Lennox revived the couple, after an hour's work. If relief had not come in ten more minutes, he said, Komoroff would have died.

A 3-month-old baby, sleeping in a crib, suffered no ill effects from the gas. Dr. Robinson explained this strange fact as due to the fact that the crib was higher than the bed, therefore, the oxygen was not wholly used up at that elevation.

Health Commissioner Parrish is expected to outline the campaign against the carbon monoxide at a conference this afternoon.

The conference was called yesterday by Mayor Cryer and will consider an emergency program to bring an end to the large number of deaths.

The Mayor extended an invitation to the Chamber of Commerce, the gas companies, the Railroad Commission, Chief Building Inspector Backus, Fire Chief Scott, City Attorney Stephens, the Board of Public Utilities, the manufacturers and distributors of gas appliances and others to attend today's conference.

The City Council unanimously adopted a resolution giving official notice of the emergency that existed due to the carbon monoxide deaths and pledging the Council's support to any practical plan worked out to meet the situation.

Dr. J. B. Sands, city health officer of Venice, also issued warnings throughout the bay district yesterday in an effort to lessen the danger from carbon monoxide.

Dr. Sands stated that persons should be very careful not to burn gas except in a ventilated room. He states that windows should be left open especially where people are sleeping. There is no excuse for keeping windows closed in Southern California, Sands stated this morning.

Husband Says Wife's Brother-in-Law Took His Place in Her Affections

Justin C. Dix declared his wife's brother-in-law took his place in his wife's affections and as head of his household, in two complaints he filed yesterday, one for divorce from Olga Genevieve Dix, and the other for $15,000 damages for alienation of her affections, against Warner Perry.

Discord in the Dix household, according to the husband, dated back to the period following the death of Mrs. Dix's sister, when she went to San Bernardino to comfort Perry. She stayed a week and came back to Los Angeles, she said, and then went back to comfort him further. After her return from this trip, Dix related, he protested that the time of mourning had expired, but she insisted on going back again. Finally he had to quit his job in Los Angeles and move to San Bernardino to keep peace in the family, he declared.

Then he came back to Los Angeles to work, but his wife would not return until Perry could come, too, according to Dix. In Los Angeles at length, they all assembled again under the same roof. Dix said his suspicions were stirred when he came home and found Mrs. Dix sitting on Perry's lap, and Perry acted embarrassed about it.

From this time on, Dix said, Perry assumed the manner of head of the household. Eventually he told his wife she had to change her conduct, which she declined to do, he declared, and left him last December 23. He said that Perry and Mrs. Dix were living at 805 Dittman street. The Dixes were married in 1917, and have a 3-year-old daughter.

LOADED TRUCK STOLEN

Machine and $4000 Worth of Fine Hosiery Taken from Mill

The theft of a truck loaded with $4000 worth of plain and fancy silk hosiery was reported to police yesterday by the Mission Hosiery Mills at Thirty-seventh Place and Moneta avenue. The truck was standing in front of the company's plant when the thief arrived, climbed into the seat and drove away. Employees of the company saw the departing truck and gave chase but were outdistanced by the machine.

"Rose of the Rancho," a play written by Richard Walton Tully and dealing with the early history of California, will be presented by the students of Lincoln High School in the school auditorium on the evening of the 16th and 17th inst. It was originally scheduled for presentation next Friday and Saturday evening.

CHILDREN'S SUIT OVER WILL OPENS

Jury Selected to Hear Testimony in Mrs. Haupt Estate Case

A jury was selected yesterday in Judge Monroe's court to hear the testimony in the trial of the suit brought by Edward Paul Haupt, 7 years of age, and Rosaline Evangeline Haupt, 3, to break the will of their grandmother, the late Mrs. Alma Haupt, who left an estate appraised at $344,000. The children sued through Charles H. Dickenson, acting as their guardian.

Officials of the local trust company were asserted in the contest to have induced Mrs. Haupt to leave most of her estate in trust with the company as trustees. Mrs. Haupt died May 25, 1922, leaving bequests ranging from $1000 to $15,000 to several relatives and friends. The contest also expressed the belief Mrs. Haupt was ill with a fatal malady at the time she executed the will.

Woman Objects to Third Party; Seeks Divorce

"You don't need to get riled; all married men go out with other women."

With these words, according to Mrs. Mary Wentworth, a third angle of the Wentworth triangle hopped into an automobile with Don Wentworth and drove away.

Wentworth is a security salesman and makes $15,000 a year, says a divorce complaint filed yesterday in Superior Court. They were married March 19, last, and his cruel treatment began April 1, the wife asserts. The separation came December 15, last. It was in San Francisco, she said, she learned of the other woman; she had seen her husband's car parked outside an apartment-house and when Wentworth and the woman appeared she asked where they were going.

DEATH HELD SUICIDE

Deputies Find Powder Marks on Huntington Fruit Dealer

Deputy Sheriffs Hanby and Hackett, investigating the shooting of Nick Campenale, a fruit dealer at Huntington Park, Sunday, reported yesterday that the case appeared to be suicide. They said he had a revolver in his hand and there were powder marks about the bullet wound.

Campenale had had trouble with his wife, the officers said they learned.

KHJ PREPARES FOR NEW JOYS

Day Offers First Breathing Spell Since Christmas

Piggly Wiggly Girls Appear for Program at Noon

Robinson, Basso Cantante, Intrigues Radioland

BY CLAIRE FORBES CRANE

Like a thoroughbred who has maintained a terrific pace beyond his customary distance because it was expected of him and whose willingness meets every demand, KHJ went through the holidays with exceptional programs and long hours. Yesterday presented the first opportunity to regain its breath and view the results of its thrilling journey into the hearts of Radioland.

We had but one program yesterday, presenting the Piggly Wiggly Girls at noon. These talented young women possess a keen insight into the musical requirements of their noon audiences, resulting in a well-balanced program of the lighter and popular classics.

The rest of the day was spent in quiet contemplating of the Yuletide events and the features in store for the followers of KHJ. In this connection our attention is first attracted to the program to be given this Wednesday night by El Encanto Apartments.

The magnitude of the enterprise which is progressing under this name surpasses anything heretofore attempted in the Southland and should prove a milestone of glory in the history of Los Angeles. To be erected on three and one-third acres within a few blocks of the Hollywood Bowl, it will command a view of the surrounding country for miles. In reflection of the character of this undertaking the contact with Radioland will mean the presentation of the best talents available. On Wednesday night the program will present as its feature attraction Estelle Heartt Dreyfuss, one of America's most popular contraltos and one of the most respected members of our city's musical circles.

The other member of our noon program yesterday was Loren Robinson, basso cantante, who made his first appearance at KHJ and left his audience with a desire to hear him soon again.

CHAIRMAN RE-ELECTED BY REALTY SALESMEN

OTHER OFFICERS SELECTED: PRESIDENT-ELECT OF BOARD SPEAKS

Phil Norton, who has headed the salesman's division of the Los Angeles Realty Board during the past year, was re-elected chairman of the organization at the annual election of officers of the executive committee yesterday noon at the board rooms at 621 South Flower street. Ned B. Johnson was elected vice-chairman and C. W. Getchell was named as the division representative on the realty board's governing body.

C. C. C. Tatum, president-elect of the realty board, addressed the salesmen briefly following the election. He outlined his plans and policies for the coming year and pledged his support to the real estate school, the first class of which opens this evening at the realty board headquarters. The course, which was sponsored by the salesmen's division, will consist of eighteen classes to be conducted every Tuesday evening. The course will be open only to salesmen and active members of the realty board and will be available to them without charge.

E. L. Farmer, head of the escrow department of the Title Insurance and Trust Company, will address the opening class this evening. W. L. Brent, retiring president of the board, will also speak.

COUNCIL ASKED TO PARLEY

City Engineer Van Norman yesterday invited members of the City Council to attend a "get together" meeting this evening at which members of the Council will have an opportunity of discussing with members of various divisions of the engineering department proposed improvements in organization so as to increase the efficiency of the department.

SEVEN BOYS PAROLED ON STRIP PARTY

Youths Are Released to Parents After Severe Reprimand by Judge

Seven youths ranging in age between 16 and 19 years who were charged with offenses against minor girls as the result of a District Attorney's investigation of strip poker parties asserted to have been held in a shack in a Sherman lumber yard, were given hearings yesterday before Judge Archbald of Juvenile Court.

They were John Kitselman, 19; Jimmy Marbery, 17; Clifford McKee, 17; Bill Zinsley, 16; Kenneth Carroll, 18; Grant Naylor, 17, and Arthur O'Neil 19. Kitselman, Marbery, Zinsley, Carroll and O'Neil were released to their parents on good behavior after receiving a severe reprimand from Judge Archbald, who told them any future breach of good conduct will result in their being sent to the State school at Ione for the period of their minority.

The case of McKee was continued twenty-six weeks and that of Naylor thirteen weeks, both boys being released to their parents.

Wife Asserts She Was Only Cook for Mate

Thomas Laverty married just to have some one to cook his breakfast, he told Augusta V. Laverty three days after the ceremony, according to her complaint for divorce, filed yesterday. Laverty was cruel and abusive on many occasions, she declared, particularly when he was interrupted. He placed newspaper reading at the head of civic duties and swore at her once when she asked him a question while he was engaged in this daily rite.

To her brothers, who were present, he said on this occasion, according to the complaint: "What do you think of a damn fool who would interrupt a man reading a newspaper?"

EX-HUSBAND WARNED

Alimony Delinquent Given Set Time to Pay Arrears

"You have been paying everyone but your wife," Judge Gates observed to Earl Mohan yesterday, when the latter was in alimony court on the complaint of his former wife, Gertrude Mohan, that he was in arrears $800 on payments due her under a court order for the support of their child.

Mohan has been paying debts, he told the court.

"Very commendable," Judge Gates declared. "But you have been paying the wrong debts. You must support your family first."

"But I've got a new family, Judge," Mohan protested.

"That is a contingency you should have considered when you married again. You knew you had one family to support. If you have not taken substantial steps toward doing so by the 29th inst., I will send you to jail," Judge Gates informed him.

MAYOR FOR CHANGES

New Health Commissioner's Plans for Department Approved

Health Commissioner Parrish called upon Mayor Cryer and secured the approval, Dr. Parrish said, of the Mayor to the commissioner's plan for reorganizing the health department to secure greater efficiency. Dr. Parrish said that he would start at once on the consolidation of divisions and other changes of organization recommended by him.

Second Suspect in Antelope Oil Case Surrenders

Gerardo Mancini, said to be the owner of 168 acres of land near Little Rock, in the Antelope Valley, where oil lots were sold in February, 1923, by the Rock Creek Development Company, surrendered himself yesterday to the United States marshal to answer to a charge of conspiracy to use the mails in a scheme to defraud. He is held under $5000 bail.

A. Remp, sales manager of the Rock Creek Development Company, was arrested last week on the same charge. He was released under $5000 bond. His hearing will be conducted tomorrow before United States Commissioner Turney.

The complaint against Remp and Mancini was made by postoffice inspectors on information filed against the two by persons who said they had bought lots from them on the representation that they would receive royalties on oil or on the returns from a vineyard. An oil well was abandoned at 500 feet, the plaintiffs say, and no vineyard was planted.

Alimony Failure is Attributed to Christmas Cost

The roar of the high tide of Christmas bills resounded in Judge Summerfield's court yesterday, when the affidavit of J. Ross Lederman, motion-picture director, was presented pleading post-holiday financial depression as a reason why he could not continue to pay his wife, Marcella Lederman, $25 a week alimony pending trial of her seventh suit for divorce from him.

The hearing on the motion, scheduled for yesterday, was continued, however, until next week, so details of Lederman's Christmas expenditures were not made public. Just before Christmas, though, he gave Mrs. Lederman $125 on a court order, and thereby avoided having to hang his stocking up in the County Jail.

"My client is broke," his attorney, Ben Cohen, said yesterday.

PLAN INSTALLATION

Native Sons to Conduct Ceremony Next Friday Evening

Native Sons of the Golden West in Southern California are invited to attend the meeting to be conducted at 136 West Seventeenth street next Friday at 8 p.m. when the various parlors of Los Angeles county will install ninety officers recently elected.

Albert V. Mayrhofer in charge of arrangements for the installation ceremonies, is planning the organization of a Parlor of Native Sons at San Pedro.

"Prospects are also good for the organization at San Pedro of a Parlor of Native Daughters," said Mr. Mayrhofer.

Hollywood to Fight Publicity Lies Sent East

In an effort to stop publicity detrimental to Hollywood at its source the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is planning a new campaign against writers for eastern newspapers who send out false stories regarding the motion-picture capital and Southern California in general. At the January open forum meeting of the chamber, scheduled for Thursday night at the Hollywood Public Library, speakers will discuss the program to be undertaken by the various civic bodies interested in the campaign.

C. G. Milham, executive secretary of the All-Year Club of Southern California; Sid Grauman, owner of the Hollywood Egyptian Theater, and J. Stuart Blackton, motion-picture producer, will be among the speakers who will appear. Each part of the program arranged will be discussed from the floor by those who attend the meeting.

Pico Land Owners Want Marbelite Instead of Metal Posts

President D. Joseph Coyne of the Association for the Betterment of Pico street yesterday appeared before the City Council on behalf of property owners on Pico street from Vermont to Western avenue, who had filed a 51 per cent petition asking for marbelite ornamental lighting posts on that section of the traffic artery. He said that a similar petition would be filed asking for the same kind of posts from Western avenue to Crenshaw Boulevard. In view of the petitions the Council rescinded its previous action directing the City Attorney to prepare an ordinance specifying metal lighting posts, adopted on recommendation of the Greater Pico Boulevard Association.

DRY FINE ASSESSED

C. W. Horn Draws $500 Penalty Under Federal Law

Charles W. Horn, recently convicted in the United States District Court on a charge of possessing fifty gallons of intoxicating liquor in violation of the prohibition law, was fined $500 yesterday by Federal Judge James. Horn was arrested by Federal agents a year ago in Room 308 I. W. Hellman Building.

Joe Miller, proprietor of a hotel at Santa Ana, was arrested with Horn. Miller pleaded guilty to selling one pint of liquor. He was sentenced on December 26, 1924, to serve six months in the Orange County Jail.

CROSLEY AGAIN LOWERS PRICE
Big Reduction in Famous Tridyn and other Radios

The biggest selling high grade receiver on the market—the Crosley Tridyn—reduced from $71.50 to $55.

We unhesitatingly state that these sets, together with the other Crosley Radios, represent the biggest values ever offered.

CROSLEY RADIOS JUSTLY POPULAR

Only the less expensive Crosley Radios have exceeded the Tridyn in sales. This deserved popularity of the entire Crosley line is the result of extraordinary performance at a very low price.

Crosley Radios cost less originally, use fewer tubes and consume much less battery current. At the same time they give results not equalled by receivers costing a great deal more and using two or three additional tubes.

The unique Tridyn circuit—a combination of Armstrong Regeneration, Radio Frequency Amplification and Reflexed Audio Amplification—has proven beyond a doubt that the features of selectivity, volume and ease of operation can be obtained with three tubes better than heretofore has been possible with five or even six.

Hundreds of voluntary letters have come to us, telling of the unparalleled foreign reception during international test week with Tridyns and all other Crosley Radios—even the little one-tube Crosley 50 at only $15.95.

It is this continued remarkable performance that has created such a tremendous demand for Crosley Radios. And it is this great popularity that now allows us to decrease our production costs and pass this large saving along to you.

NEW CROSLEY MODELS

In order to allow even a greater selection, three new Crosley Radios have been added to our extensive line. Taking its place with the well known Crosley 50 and Crosley 50-P is the leatherette covered, one-tube 50 Portable, a utility set in which the dealer can quickly make the necessary connections and allow you to carry it home complete.

The New Crosley 51 Special, a two-tube receiver similar to the Model 51, is housed in a cabinet large enough to hold the necessary batteries and has a sloping panel.

No matter what appeals to you most in a radio, you will find that point outstanding in a Crosley.

You Will Make No Mistake in Buying One.

From a small beginning three and a half years ago, Crosley Radio has grown until it now produces more sets than any other concern in the world. The present production—nearly 1000 per day—is probably from two to three times as great as that of any other radio manufacturer.

George Changes Name to Please Film Box Office

Kenneth McDonald is a more attractive name from the box office standpoint than is George McGinnis, the latter told Judge L. H. Valentine yesterday when his application to have his name changed was called for hearing.

McGinnis said he was a motion-picture actor by profession, but that he had found it impossible to secure employment under the name given to him at birth as producers generally believed it would not "get by the box office." He said he recently had completed a series of pictures under the name of Kenneth McDonald and he asked permission to assume this appellation as his own.

Matron Asks for Divorce After Score of Years of Wedded Life

Jacques Weinberger, former New York capitalist now living here, was made defendant in a divorce suit filed yesterday by Mrs. Grace Kaufman Weinberger, who says her husband is worth $1,130,000 and has an income of $50,000 a year.

After nearly twenty years of married life, she declares, Weinberger suddenly informed her last May he loved her no longer; that he had not loved her for years; that he loved another whom he refused to name; that he wanted her to go to San Francisco and get a divorce. When she refused, she plaintively alleges, Weinberger abused her and struck her, and they have lived apart since.

Mrs. Weinberger is represented in the proceedings by her attorney's sons, Jerry and A. W. Berman, Jr., who ask $1000 a month alimony pending trial. This is opposed by Weinberger, and that of two years ago, Mrs. Jacques Weinberger

MR. BORROWER: YOU CAN MAKE YOUR AUTOMOBILE A CURRENT BORROWING ASSET BY ADEQUATE INSURANCE. We are the originators of the "DEALERS' COMBINATION AND TITLE INSURANCE ENDORSEMENT," designed for the express purpose of protecting the joint interests of BORROWER, LENDER BUYER AND SELLER, thus stabilizing automobile collateral, otherwise unrecognizable and useless as a borrowing medium. CAPITAL INVESTED IN AUTOMOBILE LOANS IS ABSOLUTELY PROTECTED THRU THE MEDIUM OF OUR POLICY. Apply to any of our 500 agents or direct to Home Office for full particulars.
